Why Pick on Goats?
Swords and Pens.
Lo! The Fight King.
An Unreal World.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1927).

HINDUS think it an outrageous sin to kill a cow. Mohammedans think it their duty to sacrifice cows as part of their religion.

Mohammedans think it outrageous to have processions with music. Mohammed didn't approve of music. Hindus must have music in their religious processions. Their gods want music.

SO Hindus and the Musselman compromise. Moslems can kill cows at any time they chose, but not in public places, and Hindus can have religious processions with music banging. England kills cows, enjoys music, and rules India easily.

CURIOUSLY enough Hindus on certain occasions sacrifice, with cruel butchering, hundreds of goats in religious rites, while they allow miserable cows to die of hunger and disease because it is a sin to kill them. Why pick on the goats?

THE death of Maximilian Harden reminds you that the pen is much mightier than the sword, although you hardly believe it, when swords happen to be busy.

The Kaiser's sword is rust and dust, and he is nothing. Maximilian Harden's name stands out that of a fearless, useful critic.

COMPARE the swords and the pen of Voltaire with the sword Louis XIV, his contemporary; sword of Frederick the Great th the pen of Goethe, Schiller, Heine; the sword of any general in our Civil War with the pen of Lincoln.

The pen is mighty because it represents the BRAIN, the sword is weak because it represents the brute.

JAMES J. TUNNEY, heavyweight champion, is included in a millionaire committee organized for philanthropy as follows: Charles M. Schwab, steel king; John D. Ryan, copper king; Charles A. Whelen, tobacco king; Otto H. Kahn, money king. Mr. Tunney is the FIGHT KING, and behaves as such.

HE IS not only on a committee with big millionaires, but his lawyers are Chadbourne, Stanchfield & Levy, who help millionaires to keep out of trouble and assure Tunney that they will make it harder for anybody to get his money than to take away his championship.

WE live in a half unreal world. An unfortunate man repairing an electric light sign sixty feet in the air lost his foothold on a ladder, swung around clinging desperately with his hands. A crowd said, "It's a funny stunt, probably advertising some movie," and watched the "stunt" until the man fell.

THIS is a gambling world, as well as an unreal world. In New York, as an example, and in other places, those that might be doing something worth while, turning their time and effort to profit, can bet on horse racing in the afternoon, stocks in the morning, greyhounds and cards at night.

MR. MELLON says he can only afford to cut taxes $225,000,000 just now. Those that have income tax to pay will admit that a $225,000,000 cut is better than "being hit on the head with a sharp stone."

KING ALFONSO of Spain wants a tunnel under the Straits of Gibraltar, connecting Africa and Spain. England and France NEED a tunnel under the English Channel connecting those two countries, but the English Conservatives are afraid to risk it.

France would never bother invading England with men, when her airplanes now enable her to annihilate every English city with ease, in one day.

IT IS suggested that the dirigible Los Angeles is ready to be scrapped. Germany says a good Zeppelin like the Los Angeles should last five years.

WHY doesn't our government experiment with a modest-sized dirigible gas bag made of metal, duralumin, a mixture of aluminum, steel, copper. It would weigh less than a gas bag, last much longer and lightning wouldn't strike it. This country is rich enough to make some experiments instead of merely depending on foreigners and private initiative.

RUSSIA says she can now afford to reduce armaments, and will co-operate with the League of Nations. That, if sincere, is good news for Western Europe. The power of Russia with Asia back of her, and Germany deprived of her army, is Europe's nightmare.

Banker Dies

A. J. KELLY, JR.

Stricken with a heart attack, Mr. Kelly, president of the Commonwealth Trust Company and a leader in civic affairs of the city, died in his office at the bank in Fourth avenue, shortly before noon today.

ONE HUNTER KILLED, ONE WOUNDED

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., Nov. 1.—As the hunting season opened at sunrise, Everett Miller, 21, of Allegheny township, near here, shot at what he thought was a squirrel in a corn field. His target proved to be Charles B. Carnahan, Vandergrift mill worker. Carnahan was dead with a shotgun charge through his head when Miller reached his side.

Grover Haggerty, 35, of Uniontown, was wounded in a hunting accident near that city. He is in Uniontown with his left side peppered with buckshot fired from the shotgun of one of 10 members of a hunting party.

FARMERS ARM

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., Nov. 1.—Washington county presented the appearance of an armed camp today as farmers, banded together for the occasion, patrolled fields and highways to prevent lawless invasion of their premises by hunters. The drastic action became necessary, the farmers declared because of losses suffered in previous years.

Because of their action and the large number of "closed" areas in the county, only a comparatively few

King's Loss Won't Trip Crusade

Prosecution of cases against police officials and keepers of gambling houses and other resorts, as developed by the Citizens' League, will proceed regardless of any developments in connection with William L. King, its missing executive secretary. If King does not reappear, evidence in the hands of league officials is sufficient to "carry on," and King's continued absence would result in the dropping of only a few minor charges.

This is a summary of the league status presented by the Rev. Dr. J. Alvin Orr, its official spokesman today after a conference of league officials and unnamed attorneys last night.

FALLS DEAD TALKING TO FRIEND

A. J. Kelly, Jr., president of the Commonwealth Trust Company and a leader in civic development of Pittsburgh for nearly 50 years, fell dead at 11 o'clock this forenoon, while discussing improvements to the city's waterfronts with John W. Herron, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, a lifelong friend.

Mr. Kelly had been in failing health for about a year, but had remained at the helm of the banking institution with the same determination which brought him the enviable prominence and success he had obtained from a humble start as a country boy.

Shortly after 11 o'clock this morning, Mr. Kelly left his own office with a heavy atlas, intending to go to the board room. He stopped a few moments to chat with Mr. Herron, with whom he has been associated for about 50 years, and it was while outlining certain phases of the proposed development of Pittsburgh's wharves that he was stricken.

"I tell you, John—this Flood Commission plan is the only solution," the banker and real estate leader declared a few moments before he slumped to the floor, death forever sealing the lips which have urged so many of Pittsburgh's public improvements.

As Mr. Kelly collapsed, Mr. Herron knelt at his side, and tried to rouse him, but his attempts were futile and realizing then what had happened he made his way to the outer banking offices and called another officer. He was near collapse, and as soon as the excitement of Mr. Kelly's death had subsided slightly, Mr. Herron was removed to his home.

Coming here a youth of 18, following a year or two studying in the old Jefferson Academy, Washington, Pa., he entered upon a business career which brought him widespread prominence. He was born near Claysville, Pa., September 4, 1856, and spent his early days in Washington county.

Upon his arrival in Pittsburgh, he went into a law office and spent a short time going to school. During this time he met W. A. Herron, at that time government pension agent, and his next affiliation was with the W. A. Herron & Son Company, pioneer real estate firm in Pittsburgh.

Mr. Kelly married Julia Kuhn and the couple had three sons, Harry F., Walter H. and Paul W. Kelly, all of Pittsburgh, and a daughter, Mrs. Edith Matlach, also of Pittsburgh.

He was a member of Pittsburgh's first council of nine, having served as chairman of the finance committee in 1911 and 1912. He was appointed to this post by Gov. John K. Tener.

Mr. Kelly also was chairman of the Pittsburgh Flood Commission. Among other important offices he has held were with the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, National Real Estate Board, president of the Commonwealth Real Estate Company, incorporator of the Homewood Cemetery, trustee of the Mellon Institute, trustee of the Presbyterian Hospital, trustee of the University of Pittsburgh, incorporator of the Western Pennsylvania Institution for the Blind and member of the City Planning Commission.

He attended the Third Presbyterian Church and resided at 4136 Bigelow boulevard.

Kidnaped and Found

JULIA VANDITTI

Julia Vanditti, 14, of 917 Bedford avenue, after having been missing from her home since October 7, was intercepted on a Pittsburgh-bound train from Philadelphia by local agents of the Missing Persons Bureau. She is being conducted to Pittsburgh. Two men with whom her disappearance is linked were arrested, and are being returned here.

145 MORE HIT IN BALLOT CASES; NAME 21 BOARDS

Informations charging 105 more members of 21 election boards throughout the city and county with election law violations will be sworn to this afternoon at the direction of District Attorney Samuel H. Gardner.

This was announced at about the same time that 40 informations were sworn out before Alderman A. M. Maloney. Thirty-five of these were in cases that had been considered previously by the district attorney and five were private prosecutions growing out of the Fourteenth Ward aldermanic contest.

The day's prosecution activities will bring the grand total of election law violations as a result of the irregularities at the last primary uncovered by the Allegheny County Election Association investigation to about 250.

District Attorney Gardner announced his intention to instigate the 105 additional prosecutions after considering irregularities uncovered in 37 districts. The 105 persons to be prosecuted he said comprise the personnel of 21 boards. The members of the election boards of the other 16 districts will probably not be prosecuted, Mr. Gardner said, the irregularities uncovered not warranting such a course, he said.

Mr. Gardner decided on the prosecutions without knowing the personnel of the boards involved and, im-

Kidnapers Free Girl; 2 Jailed

Leo Marafita, 35, said to have been madly infatuated with Julia Vanditti, 14, of 917 Bedford avenue, may cool his ardor behind prison bars on a charge of kidnaping. He is alleged to have taken the girl from her home a month ago and to have held her a virtual prisoner in eastern cities since then.

Marafita and James Dandy were arrested late yesterday by Pittston police after the latter had checked up on a description of the girl and her

"DADDY" REJOINS SOCIETY; NO GIRLS

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—With the approach of winter, the opening of the social season and one thing and another, Edward West Browning, perhaps better known as "Daddy," has once more stepped into the whirl of social activities.

Since his blasted romance with the plump "Peaches"—Frances (Peaches) Heenan Browning as the more formal would say—"Daddy" had been out of the public notice.

But gradually he has returned to the gaieties social events and today he announced that he is dancing and dancing—to keep himself fit.

Browning sat in his offices [illegible] he conducts his many million dollar real estate business and told how:

He attends six to a dozen dances a night.

That in September, he was invited to approximately 1,000 social functions and regretted that he could attend only 40 per cent of them.

[illegible] many girls but [illegible] enamored of none—"they are but dancing partners."

And he cares not where the gay "Peaches" may be today. There is no hope of reconciliation.

Browning took care to emphasize that in all his dancing—and his life after office hours is just one dance

Oil Mistrial Looms Grand Jury to Act

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The trial of Ex-Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall a Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil magnate, on charges of fraud and conspiracy in the lea ing of Teapot Dome oil reserve, trembled this afternoon on the verge of ultra-sensationalism.

The developments were t

(1) The trial was adjour ed until tomorrow while Ju tice Frederick L. Siddons sidered alleged char jury tampering and ot regularities.

(2) Two unidentified jurors were reported held incommunicado at the District Supreme Court Building.

(3) District Attorney Peyton Gordon, accompanied by one of his aides, Neil Burkin shaw, and several Departm of Justice agents, went bef the Federal grand jury connection with the charg and it was reported that eral indictments were lik to be returned later in day.

(4) Government coun their lips sealed by Justi Siddons' orders, were expec ed to demand that a mistria be declared when the trial is resumed tomorrow.

ADJOURNMENT SURPRISES

The court's action in adjourning came as a surprise, for it ha been predicted that the afternoon session would see a mistrial declared because of the avalanche of ugly rumors that rolled about the court during the forenoon session.

It is understood the postponement of the decision until tomorrow wa to afford the federal grand jury sitting in a nearby court ample time t sift the charges of jury irregularit and perhaps to return indictments.

The charges of jury tamperin were presented to the judge at a se cret session this morning, attend by opposing attorneys and the t defendants, Harry F. Sinclair a Albert B. Fall.

The penalty for conspiracy to tar per with a jury in the District Columbia is six years in jail and fine of $5,000.

AFFIDAVITS BARE OIL TRIAL FIX PLOT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Four sensational affidavits were presented to the court in the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial today by United States District Attorney Peyton Gordon, any one of which was deemed sufficient to bring about a mistrial.

Juror No. 11, E. J. Kidwell, a leather worker, it was sworn to in two affidavits, asserted in a soft drink establishment that if he did not "come out of this case with an automobile as long as a block, he would be surprised."

He is quoted further as saying that, while he did not hope to gain by a conviction, he did hope to gain by an acquittal verdict.

A third affidavit, sworn to by Assistant District Attorney Neil Burkinshaw, asserted that the Burns Detective Agency, of New York, had from 14 to 15 operatives in Washington looking into every possible activity of each juror, their financial status, etc.

This affidavit was supplemented by detailed reports made by the operatives which were seized in a raid on the temporary headquarters here of the detective agency at Wardman Park Hotel.

The reports covered day by day and hour by hour, surveys of the whereabouts of the jurors.

Assistant District Attorney Shea, who made the fourth affidavit, accompanied by two deputy marshals and a headquarters detective, made the raid on the Burns headquarters. The affidavit stated they found there the manager and three operatives.

The two affidavits concerning Kidwell were made by J. Ray Akers, who heard the conversation, and by Don Key King, reporter for the Washington Herald (a Hearst newspaper), who met Akers by appointment and received from the latter the information upon which The Herald based its story this morning.

The affidavit made by Burkinshaw follows:

"I am an assistant U. S. attorney for the District of Columbia. As a result of information communicated to me I investigated certain alleged facts, with the following results:

"I caused a search warrant to be issued for Apartment 111-E at the Wardman Park Hotel, where I had discovered that one Charles G. Ruddy, a manager for the Burns Detective Agency, and one G. H. Robbins, an assistant manager of the same agency, were stopping and were engaged in directing a large number of so-called detectives employed by the Burns Detective Agency in surveillance of the petit jury empaneled and sworn in the above cause. The said search warrant was served under the personal supervision and in the presence of Walter M. Shea, to whom I had previously communicated the information I had. Said Walter M. Shea is also an assistant United States Attorney for the District of Columbia.

"The service of the search warrant and the papers obtained by its service confirm information which I had and upon which I acted, and disclose the close, intimate, objectionable and improper surveillance, the details of which are more fully set out in an accompanying affidavit made by the said Walter M. Shea.

"I aver further that the said operations were conducted and the results of the same were reported by the said C. C. Ruddy and G. H. Robbins to one Day, whose correct name, I am informed, is A. Mason Day, and who is registered at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C., where also the defendant, Harry F. Sinclair, is registered.

"I further aver that said reports were at times rendered to the said Day at the home of Donald Woodward, 2118 Leroy place, Washington, D. C.

"I aver that the said Day was what is known as the 'contact' man between the real employer of said Burns Detective Agency in this behalf and the said Ruddy acting as manager of the operatives in Washington, D. C. It is my belief and I aver that the real employer of said detectives is Harry F. Sinclair, a defendant in this cause. I have not as yet been able to interview said Woodward and said Day and am therefore unable to state what they will say as to who enlisted their services in this matter.

"I aver that there have been since on orbefore October 18, 1927, the dateo n which the jury was sworn in said cause, at various times, some or all of sixteen (16) detective employees working in Washington as above set forth.'

He said the activities of the detectives have been inimical "to the proper administration of justice in this court."

The reports, he added, show in detail that the purpose of much of the work done by said detectives was to find contacts and relationships of the jur[illegible] some ulterior and improper pu

NJUNCTION HALTS AUDIT BANK DEPOSIT QUIZ

A preliminary injunction restraining County Controller harles C. McGovern from investigating the account of Joseph ausa, a county road superintendent, in the Potter Title and rust Company, was handed down by Judge Ambrose B. Reid in ommon Pleas Court today. Hearing on the order was set for riday.

ne injunction was granted a ort time after McGovern, on plea counsel, had excused Harry He- k, assistant treasurer of the bank, appearing at today's session of nty audit probe. The Con- had indicated yesterday he uld prefer contempt charges if Hosick failed to produce the bank's records today.

McGovern subpenaed the records to determine facts concerning $13,- 500 in county checks which Gausa is said to have deposited in his Potter Title and Trust Company account in the last 15 months. Hosick, appearing as a witness yesterday, re- sed to show the records "on advice counsel."

uch testimony about the com- ion of various private roads, efly in the Broughton section of county, accompanied by the ex- ition of photographs of the roads olved, identification of the photo- aphs and other details which apparently left the situation just ex- tly where it was when the session rted, occupied the audit probe this orning.

The witnesses were William McClurg Donley, a consulting engineer; Robert S. Cain, county paymaster, and James Costello, assistant county treasurer.

IDENTIFIES PICTURES

Donley was called to identify pictures of private roads taken by a photographer at the instance of McGovern. This he did, and in answer to questions, said that the material of which these roads was constructed was the same as that used by the county in building its roads by the places involved. He testified at some length regarding a road in St. Casimir's Lithuanian Cemetery, Baldwin township. This, he said, Father Hacenas, president and secretary of the cemetery association, had told him was built at county expense and paid for by delivering the Lithuanian vote to the aldermanic candidate favored by County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong in the Seventeenth Ward.

The priest, on the stand last week, testified the road was built by the county as an act of charity. He denied any politics was involved.

Cain was confronted with an anonymous letter sent to McGovern, in which it was declared that one Nat own was being carried on the nty payroll as a guard, although never functioned in that capacity.

Cain said a Brown formerly had en employed as a guard, but de- red he did not know him nor had er been guarded by him. Costello o admitted there was a Nat Brown the payroll and said he was listed s a guard and messenger. Both greed the county treasurer was the nly one who could establish his uties definitely.

McGovern made an unexpected ove in his probe into county busi- ess late yesterday when he ordered subpenas served on 17 members of he Taxpayers' Committee of Alle- eny County. The committee is mposed of prominent business and ofessional men of the city and unty. They were ordered to ap- ar before the Controller Thursday orning.

Those summoned are A. L. Hum- rey, former president of the Cham- of Commerce and chairman of board of the Westinghouse Com- y; E. R. Crawford, McKeesport Plate Company; James C. Chap- Colonial Trust Company; A. C. man, Blaw-Knox Company; J. H. shberger, T. P. Hershberger s; R. V. Bingay, Pittsburgh nsformer Company; John M. illips, Phillips Mine and Supply ny; J. K. F. Weaver, Taren- vings and Trust Company; adtfeld, president, Alle- y Bar Association; J. ry, Diamond National ith Oliver Rea, Henry e; Leo A. Green, sec- Trades Council; vrence, secretary, nion; John L. Dea- al deputy, Brick- . McGrath, secre- ay Men's Union; ecretary, Stationary Engineers' Union, and Henry O. Evans, attorney and secretary of the committee.

SAY EMPLOYE TOLD

Members of the committee were brought into the investigation following the publishing of an advertisement in a local newspaper purporting to give facts concerning the work performed by the County Commissioner and the reason why Controller McGovern is conducting this probe. The Controller said that a member of the committee made the statement that in order to secure the information used in the advertisemtn the committee paid a county employe for the information. "If the statement is true I want to know who the employe is," the Controller said.

The name of Joseph Stadtfelt, used yesterday as a member of the committee, did not appear in today's "Facts" advertisement.

"That's not the only name, that will be off before I get through," said McGovern, declaring that another committee member had been in Europe for three months, returning Saturday.

supposed abductors, which was sent out by the local Missing Persons Bureau. The men are said to have beaten the police to it by putting the girl aboard a train bound for Pittsburgh a short time before the long arm of the law deprived them of their liberty.

Mrs. Maria Vanditti, mother of Julia, today related a story of the wild love of Marafita for her daughter. The latter and Dandy had been boarders at the Vanditti home and when Marafita insisted on being permitted to wed the child he and Dandy were ordered from the Bedford avenue home of the Vandittis. A short time afterward the girl disappeared, and then the mother found a letter said to have been written to Julia by Marafita, threatening her with death if she failed to meet him at an appointed trysting place.

It was through a letter written by the alleged abductors to friends in Philadelphia that the girl was located in Pittston.

Today Julia was on her way home from Harrisburg, where she was intercepted after the arrest of the two men, and Marafita and Dandy will be brought here to answer several serious charges.

Mrs. Vanditti said that Julia was engaged to marry a man who had spent much money in search of his missing sweetheart.

mediately after he completed his analysis of the evidence of fraud submitted by the Allegheny County Elections Associations, preparation on ascertaining the names of the board members and framing the informations was begun.

The 35 cases begun before Alderman Maloney this morning for District Attorney were on informations sworn to by County Detective Chief George W. Murren. The cases are:

Twenty-ninth district, Fourteenth Ward: J. A. Bookmyers, Alfred Hirsch, Dorothy Goldstein, Pearl Hirsch and Andrew Steinvitz.

Twenty-fourth district, Nineteenth Ward: James F. Bingham, James Howard, James H. Abbott, Joseph Howard and James Finn.

Seventh District, Twentieth Ward: John E. Grimm, Margaret Dahner, Walker Killmeyer, Mrs. Johanna McCarthy and Isabel Ganley.

Sixteenth district, Sixth Ward—Joseph J. Rosenberg, Leo S. Remerowski, Bernard F. Remerowski, Joseph W. Remerowski and Joseph Kunkel.

Alderman R. C. Dever of the Fourteenth Ward made informations against the election board of the Thirty-first district of the Fourteenth Ward, composed of Isadore Krause, Fred Ludin, Mortimer D. Levy, David F. Kanenson and Mary Blattner.

"The boxes in the two districts of the Fourteenth Ward," said Dever, "particularly the Twenty-ninth, were in the worst shape of any ever turned in in the history of Allegheny county elections, according to District Attorney Gardner.

"The board in the Twenty-ninth district credited Heber Dithrich, candidate for judge, with 640 votes, whereas the recount showed he received only 340. They gave Sol Goldstein, candidate for alderman and the husband of Dorothy Goldstein, a member of the board, at least 40 more votes than he received."

Poplar Trees Doomed In City Streets

The destruction or removal of all Carolina poplar trees along the streets of Pittsburgh is required by an ordinance introduced in Council yesterday at the request of the City Planning Commission. There are thousands of such trees in the city and, according to engineers, their tenacious and rapidly growing roots annually cause much damage to sewers, pipe lines and pavements.

The ordinance gives the city planners control of shade trees. No more could be planted until the tree and site are approved by the commission and a permit granted. Injury or destruction of any tree now planted would be prohibited except with the permission of the commission. Should it pass, all poplars must be removed or destroyed by the owners within 60 days.

ONE HUNTER IS KILLED

hunters were in the woods in this section today.

NIMRODS QUIT CITY

Thee bulk of the early automobile traffic today was countryward as thousands of hunters started out in time to be at their favorite hunting grounds when, at sunrise, the small game season officially opened.

And by train and interurban car other thousands with their canine assistants left the city. In the last day before the opening of the season rush for licenses four clerks were kept busy yesterday in the County Treasurer's office. There, more than 3,000 licenses were issued, bringing the total to 18,000. On a smaller scale, equally busy scenes were enacted in the offices of justices of the peace, aldermen and notaries public. Many of these places sold out before the day was over.

The fact that weather conditions are considered poor for the opening of the season did not lessen the enthusiasm or the number of those out after rabbits, birds and squirrels. They are willing to accept the handicap in the form of dry weather, underbrush and trees that have not yet been denuded by frost in order to get out for the first kills.

15,000 IN WESTMORELAND

GREENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 1.—Some 15,000 hunters invaded the forests of Westmoreland county for the opening day of the small game hunting season today, it was estimated by state police and sportsmen's organizations who are working in conjunction to prevent trespassing and destructive methods of the hunters. Westmoreland county alone issued 12,400 hunting licenses, the treasurer's office reported today. Game wardens declared rabbits plentiful in this section. Ring neck pheasants and quail, they say, are not so numerous.

THRONG GREENE COUNTY

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Nov. 1.—The annual small game hunting season in Greene county—hunters' paradise—opened today. The 2,500 hunters of the county who took out licenses here were augmented by scores of small game hunters from Allegheny and Washington counties.

Due to the restocking of the county with rabbit and quail, this kind of game is plentiful this fall.

SMALL GAME PLENTIFUL

FRANKLIN, Pa., Nov. 1.—Ideal weather conditions sent thousands of hunters to the woods of Venango, Clarion, Forest and Warren counties for the opening day of the hunting season today. The temperature in this section ranged around 60 degrees today following a summer thundershower and a fairly heavy rain during the night.

OIL MISTRIAL LOOMS

intimated that they expected sensational developments.

The court meanwhile will act upon a number of affidavits filed with him by the government's special counsel in the oil case. He may declare a mistrial upon his own motion. The charges were said to involve two jurors, who were alleged to have predicted a hung jury.

The subject of a mistrial was debated at the morning session by opposing counsel, and a recess then taken for lunch. At the start of the afternoon session Judge Siddons ordered the adjournment upon his own motion.

"I shall occupy myself this afternoon and tonight in further consideration of the matter. Therefore I will adjourn court until tomorrow morning, when I hope to be ready to render a decision."

It was reported that two of the jurors were being detained by the federal authorities. The identity of the two could not be ascertained and the government attorneys refused to discuss the charges because of an injunction of silence imposed by Judge Siddons.

DAME RUMOR ACTIVE

Dame Rumor, however, was active. She had it that two of the jurors were found discussing the trial in a Washington "speakeasy." According to this version, one of the jurors—while in his cups—declared positively the trial would end in a hung jury.

The usual crowds attended the session but the proceedings in open court were only routine and few, if any, realized the seriousness of the secret session in Judge Siddons' room. As a result the sensational development passed virtually unnoticed.

Fall and Sinclair left the courthouse directly after the secret session ended. Fall appeared tired and wan, while Sinclair seemed greatly depressed. In sharp contrast to numerous previous meetings with newspapermen, when he displayed a jovial, joking attitude, Sinclair was silent and gloomy, his head bowed as he rushed by reporters who sought to question him.

When Sinclair was questioned, Martin W. Littleton, his chief attorney, intervened with:

"All I know is in the papers."

Littleton referred to an article in the Washington Herald, which said certain affidavits had been presented to the government of such a serious character as to warrant a mistrial.

The jurors were locked up while the opposing counsel met in Siddons' room. They were released later and allowed to leave the court house during the recess.

"I dance for relaxation and ex cise," he said. "I work all day a hence can not play golf or tenn Theaters are stuffy. So I go dances."

A BUSY EVENING

He has perfected a simple syste to keep track of his engagements. I his apartment, he explained, is a series of envelopes grouped in sevens and each carrying the imprint of a day of the week. In these envelopes he slips all his tickets and invitation.

Comes the night, and Browning, in dinner suit, reaches into the envelope for that evening.

He withdraws some 20 tickets and starts out, going to as many places as possible.

"Perhaps I go first to the Ritz," he recounted. "Maybe the place is draughty or the crowd uncongenial. I stay only 15 minutes and go to the opening of a new night club. Then to a lodge dance; then to a private affair. And so on until I am ready to retire."

"I meet many girls," he went on, "but I am not interested in any one of them.

HE'S "OFF" GIRLS

"Now and then you will see a picture of me and some girl together and she will be called 'Browning's new favorite.' You may be sure it i only a press agent stunt. I am no interested in any girl except Dorothy Sunshine."

Dorothy is the 10-year-old adopted daughter of the big lien and mortgage man from the West Seventies. For a Hallowe'en gift yesterday he sent her a basket of fruit weighing 100 pounds.

"It took two men to carry it," he said. "My, I wish you could have a picture of it."

Browning was asked whether there was any chance of reconciliation with "Peaches" from whom he won a separation last March after the trial at White Plains, N. Y., had attracted world-wide attention.

"None. Utterly none," he replied. "I do not even know where she is. She may be in California. I do not know and do not want to know."

"The girls I meet are merely dancing partners," he said.

Meanwhile, the course of "Daddy" Browning's merry-making will continue. What with holiday festivities and all he hopes that during November and December he will be able to attend 500 dances.

FIRES HOSPITAL TO PLAY HERO

ARREST MOTHER FOR TYING BABE TO FENCE

By Universal Service

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Barefooted, cold and tied with a belt to a railing near the sidewalk, Freddie McBride, 18 months old, aroused sympathy today among neighbors near his home. They complained to the Children's Society, and Mrs. McBride, 30, the mother, was arrested on the charge of having put the baby on a leash.

She admitted to Magistrate McQuade, but after being held in $200 for special sessions was freed with a warning not to do it again.

"What else could I do? Where we live, I couldn't leave the child alone in our basement while I was working, for fear he'd hurt himself. And couldn't let him run about the streets, for fear he'd be killed by an automobile."

Plaudits of Women Are Sought By Brooklyn Porter

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—A porter's desire to be a hero and perform mighty deeds before women he sought to impress caused Ernest Rohde, 42, to set fire to the Methodist Episcopal Hospital in Brooklyn, according to his confession.

That the 325 patients, many of whom were carried to safety through stifling smoke, escaped without harm was due in part to the prompt rescue work by Rohde, who unfolded the strange obsession he said had pursued him for years, according to the authorities.

Convinced the man is insane, District Attorney Dodd will ask for the immediate appointment of a lunacy commission, with the view to having Rohde sent to an institution for the criminally unbalanced.

Secretly, while the hundreds in the hospital were unaware of their peril, he plotted to do this "great deed" of his, which would enable him to prove himself a hero, and, yesterday, he is alleged to have told the district attorney, the opportunity came.

"I was up in the attic, in the detached building, in which are the quarters of the doctors," he said in his alleged confession.

"Lying on the floor was a piece of gauze, about four inches wide and 18 inches long. It was four ply, and as I noticed it, I remembered the box of matches that I had picked up several days ago, and which I had put into my pockets for possible use.

"I struck one of the matches and held it to the gauze. It took fire, and I kicked it under some wooden drawers that were stored in the attic.

"I waited until the woodwork was burning well, and then I walked downstairs, where I met one of the orderlies. This man told me that he smelled smoke, and asked me to investigate."

"I grabbed a fire extinguisher, and so did the orderly. We tried to fight our way up stairs to where the fire was, but the flames were too strong, and we had to retreat."

Still determined to play the hero's role, Rohde was the first to unreel the hospital fire hose.

Dropping in his tracks, Rohde gave the appearance of being unconscious, and it was while he was being revived with the use of the pulmotor that he was recognized by Fire Marshal Brophy and Assistant Fire Marshal William Ferris.

"Why, you're the man I had arrested 10 years ago for setting fires in the Park Slope section of Brooklyn," exclaimed Brophy, whereupon Rohde immediately recovered from his seeming semi-coma.

INDEPENDENTS WANT PROBE BOND BACK

The Independent Party, with which Controller C. C. McGovern is associated, today asked Common Pleas to return $1,150 posted to cover the costs of the vote recount in districts where irregularities were suspected.

Attorney R. H. Frank, counsel for the party, made clear that the money is needed to bring in still more ballot boxes. The court will hear the request next Monday.

A $50 bond is required by the courts for each box brought in for recount and if, in the recount, irregularities are indicated, the bond is returned to the complainant.

GARLAND URGES BUILDING OF AIRPORT

The most vital problem facing the city and county is the establishment of an adequate airport, said Councilman Robert Garland, speaking today at the noon meeting in the Republican headquarters, Hotel Henry. "Today Pittsburgh is not on the aerial map," he said, "and it will take approximately $1,000,000 to take care of this proposition. We should secure and equip a plot of ground of at least 200 acres."

Urging support for the entire Republican ticket and especially for County Commissioners, Garland said that as usual in the heat of a campaign charges are being hurled recklessly, adding, "One may look for many wild statements where the tongue wags too freely and the pen too nimbly."

Garland declared for "the voting machine or any other method by which true counts could be returned."

Must Die in Plane to Get Publicity, Rogers Says

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Nov. 1.—Five people killed in plane Sunday and it is headlined in every paper. Saturday in Los Angeles at one grade crossing seven were killed and six wounded and the papers didn't even publish the names. It looks like the only way you can get any publicity on your death is to be killed in a plane. It's no novelty to be killed in an auto any more.

Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

That beautiful even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for only 75 cents, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

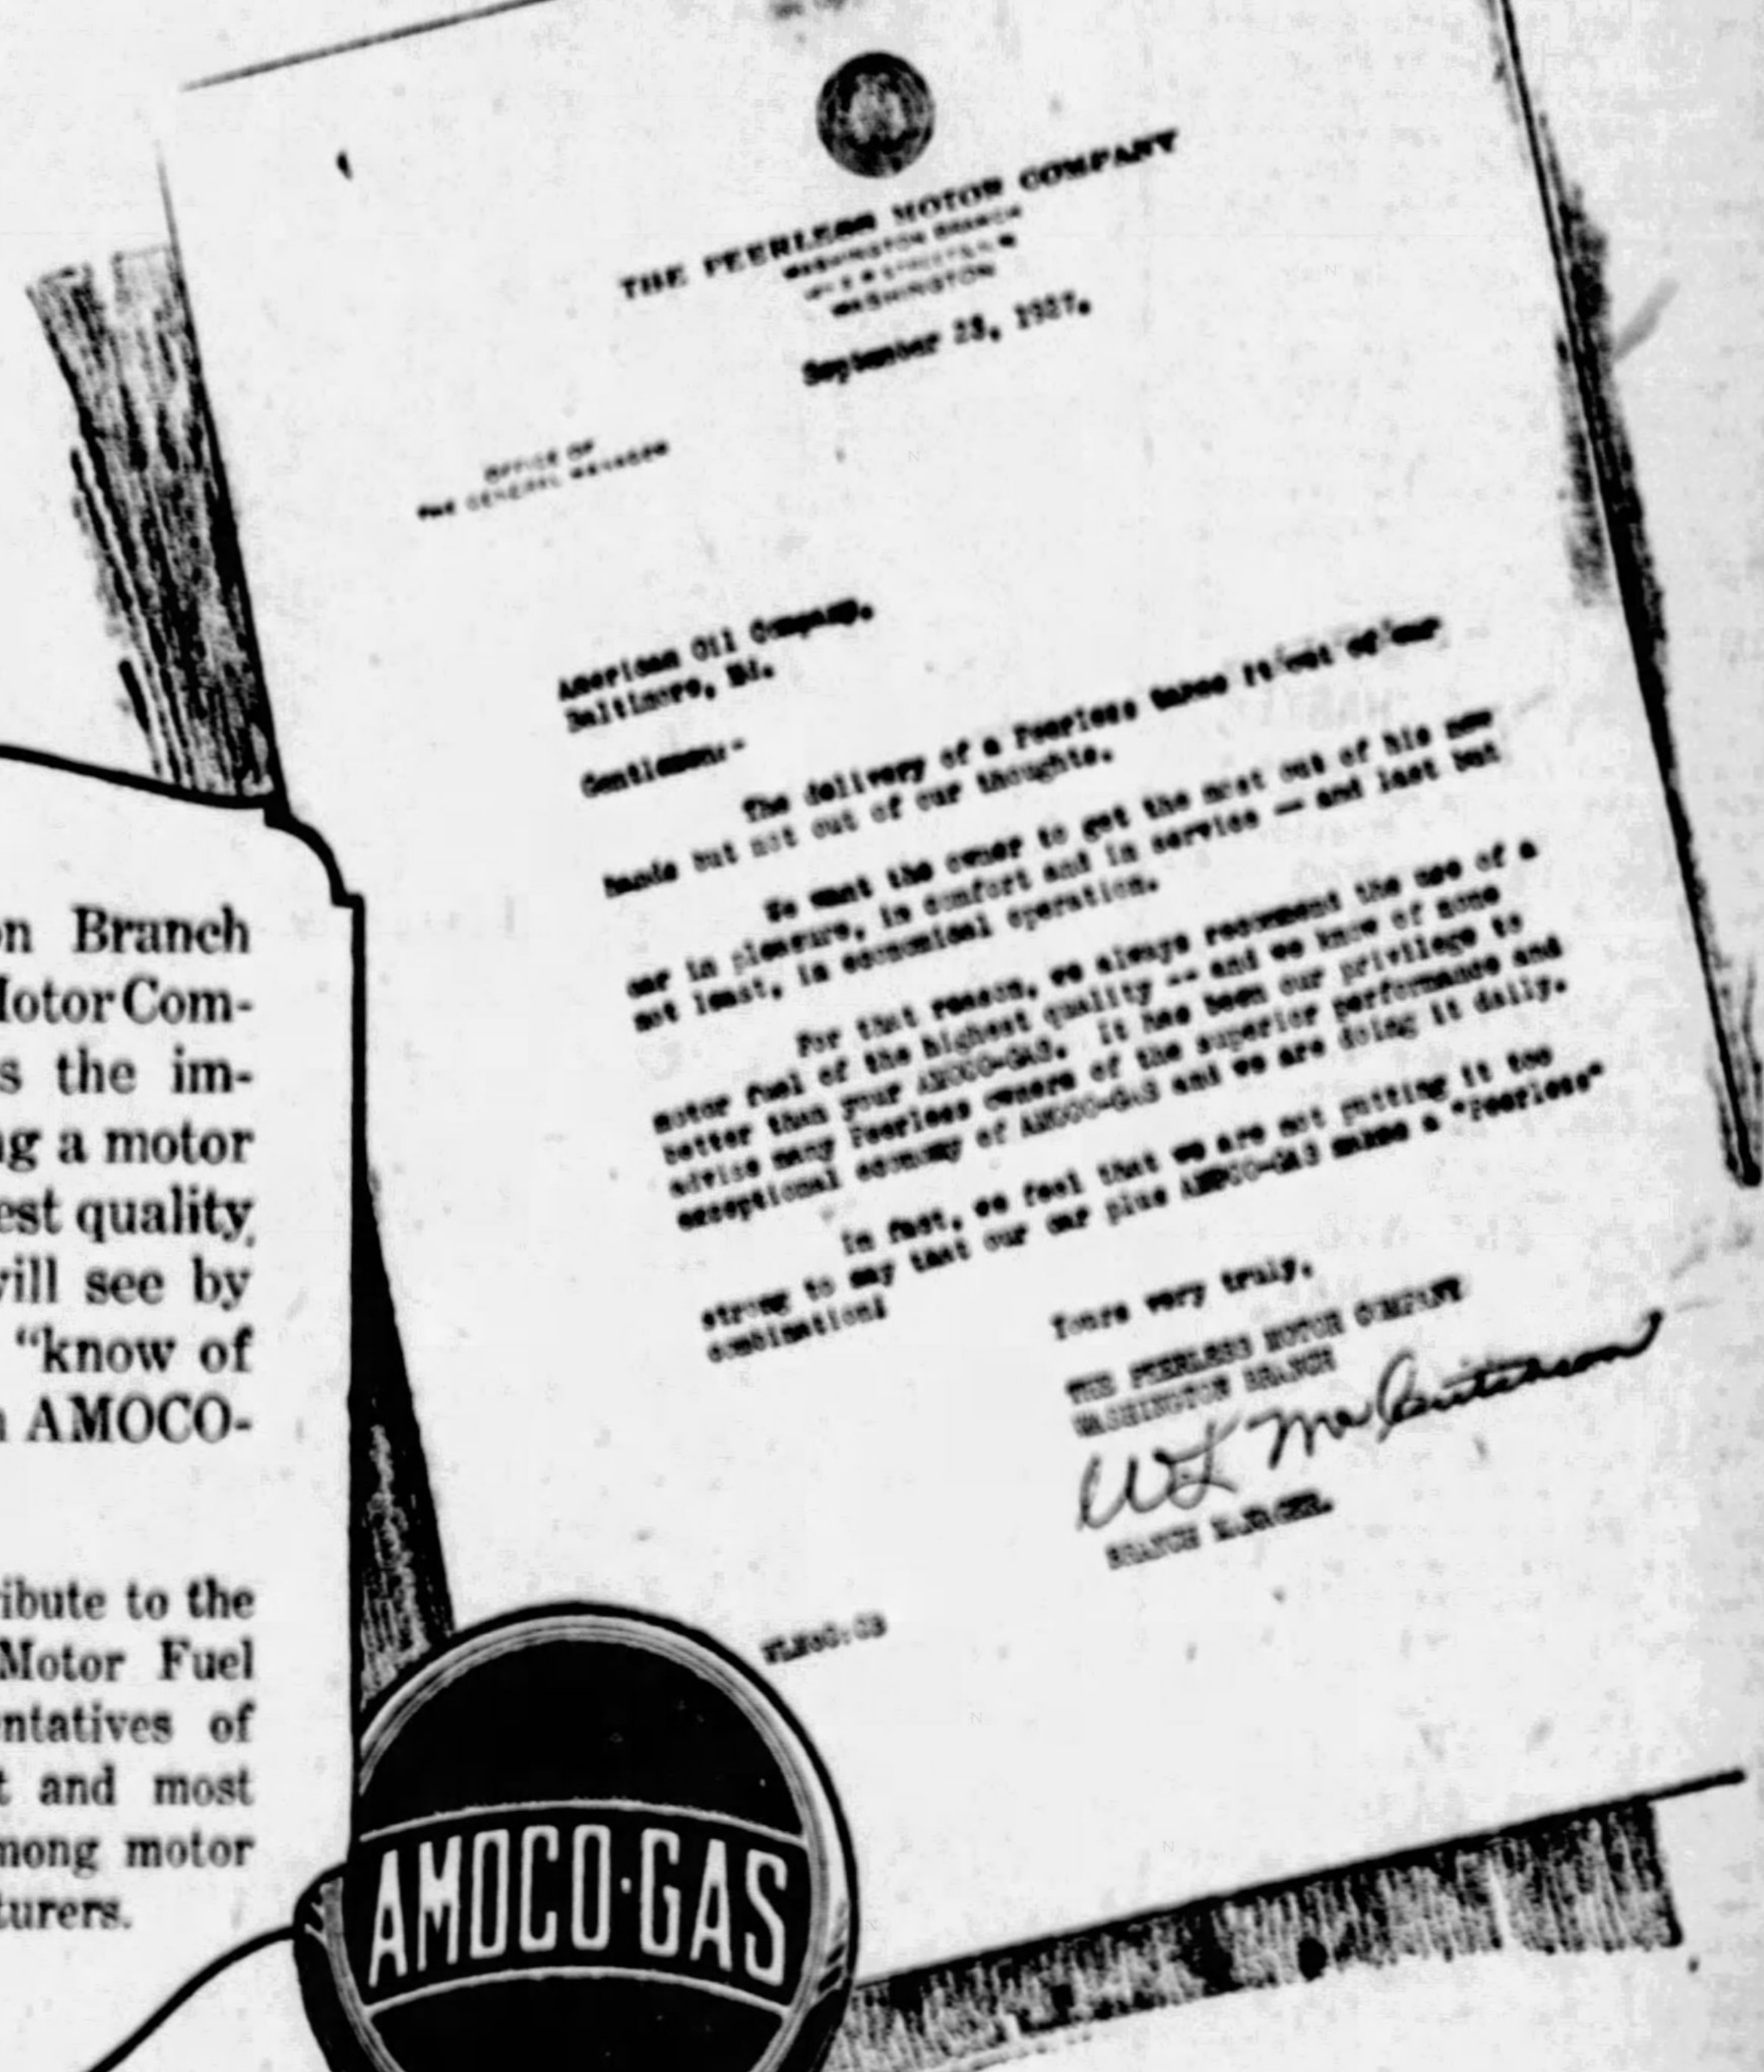
Our Car and Amoco-Gas makes a "Peerless Combination"

The Washington Branch of the Peerless Motor Company recognizes the importance of using a motor fuel of the highest quality—and as you will see by the letter, they "know of none better than AMOCO-GAS."

A well-deserved tribute to the Original Special Motor Fuel from the representatives of one of the oldest and most honored names among motor car manufacturers.



THE PEERLESS MOTOR COMPANY
WASHINGTON

September 23, 1927.

OFFICE OF THE GENERAL MANAGER

American Oil Company,
Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen:-

The delivery of a Peerless takes it out of our hands but not out of our thoughts.

We want the owner to get the most out of his new car in pleasure, in comfort and in service — and last but not least, in economical operation.

For that reason, we always recommend the use of a motor fuel of the highest quality -- and we know of none better than your AMOCO-GAS. It has been our privilege to advise many Peerless owners of the superior performance and exceptional economy of AMOCO-GAS and we are doing it daily.

In fact, we feel that we are not putting it too strong to say that our car plus AMOCO-GAS makes a "Peerless" combination!

Yours very truly,

OOKING SCHOOL EQUIPMENT TO BE MODERN

Local department stores and electrical dealers have been called upon to equip the modern kitchen installed in Memorial Hall for the cooking school presented next week by the Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph. The school opens Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and continues through Thursday night, but a completely equipped kitchen will be ready by Monday for the approval of Mrs. George O. Thurn, famous food lecturer, who will direct the school. Not only are certain pieces of modern kitchen equipment necessary to simple home cookery, Mrs. Thurn believes, but there are many large and small devices new to most housekeepers which this lecturer uses in her kitchen and with which she prepares the dishes at the cooking school. The kitchen in Memorial Hall will be equipped with novel as well as useful new appliances, and Mrs. Thurn will discuss such equipment as a part of her demonstration lectures.

The lectures are planned to cover the most important phases of kitchen activity, marketing, menu planning, cookery, fancy cookery, entertaining with special emphasis on new methods of food preparation. There will be new dishes cooked every day of the school and the recipes for these dishes as well as for many other good ones will be distributed at each lesson.

"Many women feel that the old way was good enough for their mothers, and therefore good enough for them," Mrs. Thurn said when discussing the plans for the kitchen. "But fashions have changed in the home as well as in the commercial and industrial world. Mother had to bake her bread, and in those days there were no good public bakeries. She had to spend a large part of every day in the kitchen because the coal range was slow, her tools were clumsy, and her kitchen equipment was made before people had heard the word 'efficiency.' A few well chosen, simple, modern devices, the new refrigerators and ranges and the fine food products on the market today have cut women's kitchen work in half. But she must learn to choose the good from the bad in these appliances and foods."

Mrs. Thurn will tell her audience how to equip their kitchens. She invites all of the women of the Pittsburgh district to bring their questions on new equipment—how to choose and use it and how to care for it—with them to the lectures. She also invites questions on cookery and other phases of home-cooking.

Her experience as a practical home maker, as a teacher and lecturer before schools and many women's organizations, has proved that women all over the country are keenly awake to the advantages of scientific housekeeping theories which can be adapted to their own home-making problems. Modern kitchen equipment is only one of the many helps for better and easier housekeeping. How to market, how to keep a household budget, how to cook foods in the most economical and most savory ways, how to plan the family meals, how to entertain the family's friends are other factors which the housekeeper must consider. These will be discussed in the school next week.

The demonstrations will begin at 2 o'clock each day, but the doors of Memorial Hall will be open at 1 o'clock afternoons and 7 o'clock Thursday night to accommodate the crowds which promise to be there. Some of the women's clubs and societies will attend in groups, and from the number of telephone calls and letters which are pouring into the office, the audience will be a capacity crowd for every day of the school. Women are urged to bring note books and pencils to jot down pointers from the lectures for shopping and cookery ideas will be given every day. The recipes of the dishes prepared, as well as other recipes, will be in printed form and distributed during the lectures.

RADIO IS BETTER WITH BATTERY POWER

Stick to batteries

You can't beat batteries for radio. Battery power is smooth, silent—ever ready at the turn of the switch. And no battery has proved so economical, so long-lived as the patented big Eveready Layerbilt "B" Battery No. 486. This unique battery contains more active materials than any other battery of equal size, because it is built up in layers—the only "B" battery so made.

You'll get more satisfaction from your radio with Layerbilts, your power costs will be less in the long run, and you won't have to buy "B" batteries nearly so often. They are made by the National Carbon Company and backed by its reputation and resources.

FACTS

Taxpayers of Allegheny County

McGOVERN SAYS:

Since the Controller's Office has been hampered and obstructed by the Commissioners and the courts have given no relief, by postponing an audit at the request of the Commissioners, I concluded to conduct an audit of the accounts of the County Commissioners myself—Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, August 14, 1927.

The Facts Are

November 1926, the Controller was notified that it was illegal for the Commissioners to appropriate money for an independent audit. His recourse for this expenditure is to the Court.

He has never asked the Court for an audit, which he could readily have done in February 1927 when he filed in Court his Annual Report.

Instead, on June 3, 1927, he filed an appeal from the Salary Board decision against an increase of 12 men in his present office force which is 22 men.

The Judge sitting, on his own initiative and not at the request of the Commissioners, postponed the hearing.

The Commissioners have always welcomed a lawful audit, made from a non-political standpoint.

$33,166,240.69 of your money as taxpayers has been spent or authorized for County improvements under County Commissioners Armstrong, Babcock and Houlahen. C. C. McGovern, recently defeated for renomination for the office of County Controller, is now basing his candidacy for County Commissionership upon charges that these men are incompetent, inefficient and extravagant, and that he is efficient and competent. Facts, alone, should determine our votes for this important office at the general election on November 8th when all these men are candidates. We intend publishing daily summaries in the newspapers of the charges and the facts relating to each charge.

TRAINMEN ASK INCREASE

By Universal Service

CLEVELAND, Nov. 1.—The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen yesterday renewed its request for a wage increase of $1 a day, which was first made a year ago, but refused by the roads.

The increase, which constitutes an increase of approximately 19 per cent over the present scale, will be asked from all railroads west of the Mississippi River, according to William G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Filing of the request for a wage increase at this time is simply a preliminary move to pave the way for the opening of negotiations for a new wage scale before the present agreement expires on March 1, 1928, it was pointed out.

When the railroad rejected the former request it went to arbitration, but the board refused to grant an increase except to yard men, who did receive a 7½ per cent increase.

Last year trainmen east and south of the Mississippi asked for a 19 per cent increase and were granted 7½ per cent by the arbitration board.

MINERS PLEAD NOT GUILTY IN BURNING OF TIPPLE

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Nov. 1.—Forty-nine union miners pleaded not guilty to indictments charging destruction of property of the Maple Leaf mine, near Newport, August 1, when the tipple was consumed by fire with $50,000 loss. They were all given continued freedom on their own recognizance till time for trial.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said:

"One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."

Not Like Medicine

Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine. Perfected by the famous Chemical Products Division of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Look for the Nujol bottle with the label on the back that you can read right through the bottle.

RUTH GOES SHOPPING IN PARIS; AVOIDS CROWDS

Welcomes Chance to Escape Attention

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Ruth Elder and George Haldeman today prepared to spend a quiet day catching up on their correspondence and sight-seeing while Paris postponed official ceremonies during the three-day religious holiday.

Both fliers expressed their joy at being afforded an opportunity for rest from official functions, but their rest is being snatched precariously from crowds of photographers, reporters and autograph seekers who besiege them at every turn.

Yesterday they went unmolested to and from their hotel only by using freight elevators and back doors.

Ruth and Haldeman broadcast through the government station in the Eiffel Tower and thanked the French people for the fine reception accorded them in Paris.

The afternoon was spent shopping, with Haldeman doing most of it. He bought two suits, one gray and one mauve, and a number of shirts.

HELD IN MURDER CASE HERE

MEADVILLE, Pa., Nov. 1.—Melville Eiler is being held by police here today pending word from authorities at Pittsburgh where Eiler is said to have shot and killed his brother-in-law, Sylvester Fisher, last March. Clippings from newspapers giving the story of the shooting were found in Eiler's possession when he was arrested for bootlegging at Frenchtown, near here. He says he was tried and acquitted in the Fisher case.

HUNTER, 97, DIES ON WAY OUT

ALTOONA, Pa., Nov. 1.—Andrew Kipple, 97, believed the state's oldest hunter, dropped dead early today as he prepared to participate in the opening of the small game hunting season.

Kipple left the home of relatives at Fredericksville near here and fell over before reaching the hunting fields. Heart disease is thought to have been the cause of death.

The oldest retired employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad, Kipple was placed on the honor roll in 1905 after many years service as a car shop foreman in Altoona.

NAB "WINDOW CLEANER" THIEF

IMPOSTOR LOOTS GIRLS' LOCKER OF $750

A rag over his shoulder, a bucket in his hand, a young man, 19, walked into the Alling & Cory Company plant at River avenue and Alcor street today and proceeded to wash the windows of the girls' locker room.

Five minutes later girls were pounding on the door of the room and the young man was dropping out of one of those windows with $750 in cash and jewelry in his pockets.

Ten minutes later he was under arrest in his room at 605 Allegheny avenue. He said he was Harry Allen and that he had once been a window-cleaner at the Alling & Cory plant.

He admitted, too, detectives said, that he had stolen in the same fashion at the Eastman Kodak Company, 606 Wood street; Chatfield & Woods Company, 32 Second avenue; Dunlop Hotel, 974 Liberty avenue, and Florence Hotel, 212 Smithfield street.

As he was being escorted to a cell he further revealed, according to detectives, that he had escaped from the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., four months before his sentence was concluded, on a larceny charge for which he had been convicted in Cleveland, O.

The Alling & Cory loot was found on the man, police said. It consisted of two rings valued at $600, and $127 in cash which was taken from the locker of Mrs. Annie Mason, 157 Lincoln avenue, Bellevue, and $15 stolen from Mary L. Hoffman, Vandergrift.

ESCAPE EASY FOR HIM

Horace Nicholas, 34, Negro prisoner at the county workhouse, walked away to freedom yesterday. Sent with a guard to the stock yards at Herrs Island, the wagon on which they were riding figured in an accident and the team had to be unhitched in East Ohio street. Nicholas was directed to take the horses across the street and kept on going. He was committed September 27 to serve 60 days on a suspicious person charge.

Some Persons -:- Whom We See This Week -:- On Our Stage

ALEXANDER CLARK, character comedian, who plays something of a "Lightnin'" Bill Jones type, in "My Maryland," in the Alvin.

MYRNA SHARLOW, soprano prima donna of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, which i. presenting musical repertoire in the Pitt for six days, including two matinee performances.

E. H. SOTHERN, last seen here in Shakespearean roles, is appearing in "General John Regan," Irish comedy, in the Nixon Theater.

Sothern in a Witty Satire by Preacher and Humorist Generates Smiles in Nixon

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

GEORGE SEIBEL

BALLYMOY in Ireland is the place where a statue to General John Regan was unveiled last night. Very likely there is no town named Ballymoy, as there never was any general named John Regan, but that does not matter really. Ballymoy is the old planet on which we are spinning around the sun, and General John Regan is any old humbug for which the population of this merry planet is made to toss its hats into the air. That is the real moral of the comedy, "General John Regan," which a worthy Irish Clergyman wrote some years ago and which was resurrected at the Nixon Theater last night to serve E. H. Sothern as a vehicle for his lighter moods.

Mr. Sothern plays the village doctor, who takes up the suggestion made by a waggish American and builds a whole legendary history around the "deliverer of Bolivia." George A. Birmingham, that's the author's penname, has filled his comedy with bubbling humor, and the character of the doctor above all others should exude exaggeration and overflow with blarney. Mr. Sothern takes it a bit too seriously—a wink or a chuckle here and there would go far to show the audience that Dr. O'Grady is not some company promoter trying to engineer a fraud, but a half-unconscious poet like Sir John Falstaff. He is rather too superior to the village folk, when he should be their superior only in the imaginative faculty and the gift of gab. It is a juicy and unctuous part, not a strenuous and strident one. He should jolly his fellow citizens, rather than bluff them. His spirit of mischief, his bubbling humor, is the motive that impels him to fool the people, and the moment he becomes a deliberate faker he fails to carry conviction.

Despite this too serious key, the comedy proved hugely amusing, and Mr. Sothern's debonair manner, his finished delivery, carried the audience with him as he carried the people of Ballymoy with him. He was supported by a cast exceptionally well chosen for this comedy. It is an [illegible] comedy, you know, and it is [illegible]ly played by actors with names [illegible] Sullivan, McSorley, Connelly, [illegible]Gonigle. A considerable share [illegible] laurels, or was it shamrocks, [illegible] carried off by George Tawde, [illegible] Golligher, the republican editor who is always ready to make a political speech, while Henri Learock as a benevolent and easy-going priest also gave a finished performance. Nellie Neil as the almost half-witted waitress and chambermaid who is put forward as General Regan's last surviving relative, and Robert Rendel as a stammering and helpless lordship, evoked many smiles and grins by their characterizations.

For this is a play of smiles and grins, rather than guffaws and roars. It is rich and mellow humor that laughs slyly at the foibles of humanity. It is very light in texture, and the waits between the acts were too long, yet the audience never lost interest, though there is not the suspi[illegible] love story. Best of all, it [illegible]r. Sothern a delightful op[illegible] for comedy, which he can [illegible] rich humor if he takes it [illegible]ghtly. E. H. Sothern is an actor at home in such a part, and "General John Regan" is a play of infectious charm.

"CHEATING CHEATERS" CAMERAPHONE PICTURE

"Cheating Cheaters," adapted from [illegible]e successful stage play of that [illegible]me, is the current photoplay fea[illegible]re in the Cameraphone. The action [illegible] laid against the New York underworld and the fashionable suburbs of the city. The cast includes Betty [illegible]ompson, as leading woman; Kenneth [illegible]arlan and Sylvia Ashton. A short [illegible]reen comedy, news pictures and [illegible]velty reels are among other attrac[illegible]s.

Burlesque With Specialities in Academy

"Follies of Pleasure" is this week's burlesque at the Academy. Clyde Bates appears in comedy. Opal Taylor, a Pittsburgh girl, was given a cordial reception by friends and her vocal numbers met with approval. Jean Gaskill, Buddie Nichols, Frank Mack, Lew Petel and Jess Mack were prominent. Vandergould released himself from handcuffs, [illegible]anacles, straitjacket and chests as an extra attraction. Blondet[illegible] an Oriental specialist, and Nola Edwards and dancing girls completed the varied bill.

Pyorrhea Sufferers Hail New Treatment

Pyorrhea is an infection between the teeth and gums. This infection loosens the teeth. Gradually your teeth will fall out if you don't do something for it—and do it quick!

You may brush your teeth faithfully every day. But this won't stop pyorrhea. It won't keep your gums from bleeding and your teeth from loosening. Use a mouth antiseptic powerful enough to destroy the pyorrhea infection—GERM-ORAL.

All the pyorrhea germs, all the infection, all decay in your mouth, are destroyed by GERM-ORAL. It quickly ends the dreaded pyorrhea for good. Thousands of men and women who despaired of ever getting rid of this terrible trouble, write us letters [illegible] the many wonders GERM-ORAL [illegible] done. One man writes: "Though [illegible]ife's teeth are all sound, I am [illegible] she will lose them, on account [illegible] diseased gums. She has trench [illegible] Send me a bottle of GERM- [illegible] Six weeks later he writes: [illegible]'s gums absolutely well, al[illegible] dentists said they were [illegible]f. LIVELY COMEDY IN DAVIS

After several weeks topheavy with all sorts of dancers, the bill in the Davis Theater this week again restores the balance with some good comedy acts, among which Jules Howard and company, in "Battery to the Bronx," take the lead. Their skit on the busy fire department is especially clever. Lively and laughable monkeyshines are also furnished by J. Francis Dooley and Corinne Sales, under the punning title "In-So-Late." Then there are Martha Pryor and Harry de Costa, who present "Subtle Sayings and Singable Songs," which is all correct except the subtlety—that is sometimes broad. Besides these the master clown, Ferry Corwey, contributes his full quota of laughter to the program, by a number of ingenious musical inventions and sharpshooting with his cap-pistol. The one dancing act on this week's bill, Harry Roye and Billie Maye, is really very good—Miss Maye's waitress dance is decidedly clever. The three Bennett Brothers also introduce an entertaining drunken dance into their collegiate act, while the four O'Connors exhibit rhythmic agility. Even the feature photoplay, "Tell It to Sweeney," is humorous, with Chester Conklin in the principal role; it is a comedy of a Western railroad and a runaway marriage. All in all, a refreshing douche of laughter after a period of drought.

"BLUES" SINGER IN HARRIS

The vaudeville in the Harris this week soars from the depths to the heights when it comes to entertainment. Ada Browne, Negro singer, "stole" the show at yesterday's opening performance. She kept a capacity audience's hands in enthusiastic movement with her singing of "papa" and "blues" songs. And well she carried quite a lot of avoirdupois through a Black Bottom dance. She was assisted in her act by a "boy," Harry, who showed "how wicked fingers can tickle the ivories." Jim Kilpatrick, his Texas Chicks and a dog put over a pleasing melange of comedy, dance and song. The Chicks proved chic and talented. Joseph Pierrot and company started the show with accordion and xylophone music. The "company" had a personality that pleased. True Rice, assisted by Florence Newton, offered 10 or 15 minutes of nonsense. Arselma and Mann chattered themselves into some laughs. Acrobatic tumbling was the contribution by Murano and Girton. "Judgment of the Hills," the photoplay feature, mixes a ten-night-in-a-barroom and war theme, and is laid in the Kentucky hills. The acting of the juvenile player, Frankie Darro, goes a long way in putting it across. Short features are on the bill.

BLANCHE SWEET IS STAR IN OLMPIC PHOTOPLAY

Blanche Sweet is seen on the Olympic screen this week as a woman who sacrifices everything for the man she loves. The picture is "Singed" and it presents the story of a dance hall girl, who becomes a "lady," and of her "man," who, through the woman's efforts, rises to a place in the world of wealth and society. The live happy-ever-after effect is attained in the end. Warner Baxter is the man. The Vitaphone offers the Merle Twins, singers; Eddie Peabody, "banjomaniac," and music by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. News pictures are shown.

Sills in Comedy Is On Grand Screen

"Hard-Boiled Haggerty," with Milton Sills as a daring American aviator of the World War who pays no heed to military restrictions when he wants to have a good time, was shown as the screen feature in the Grand yesterday. The stage attraction was The Buffalodians, a peppy orchestra. There is but little war atmosphere in the Sills picture, most of the action occurring as a result of Haggerty's A. W. O. L. trip to Paris. An encounter with military police provides comedy. Escaping them, Haggerty is shielded by Charmaine, played by Molly O'Day, and he thereby meets his fate, the finale having Haggerty telling the girl he knows she "will love Chillicothe." There is a dramatic side to the romance, too. You'll like the picture. The Buffalodians pleased with their music, including Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue," and vocal selections. The Pitt-Allegheny game is in the news pictures.

"La Boheme" Sung in Pitt As Opening Attraction of San Carlo Opera Company

By J. FRED LISSFELT.

The San Carlo Opera Company opened their annual visit in Pittsburgh at the Pitt Theater last evening, before the usual enthusiastic crowd of devotees. Puccini's "La Boheme" was a fine opening performance. It is, I now believe, the loveliest of his works; here is his richest orchestration, here his most facile melodies flow in endless stream about a story of artist life in the best Parisian days.

The libretto, while not faithful in every respect to Henry Murger's romance, has taken the most human episodes from that story—Mimi's exquisite love scene, Musette's gay flirtations, home life of the carefree dreamers in Montmartre, and then the beauty of their devotion to one another.

Last night's performance was an unusual one for this company. Carlo Peroni at the orchestra helm conducted, it seemed, with more than usual grace. His music was less stilted than when we last heard him. Myrna Sharlow was borrowed from the Chicago Opera for several performances, making her bow as Mimi. There is, of course, a polish about her work that many San Carlo sopranos never approach. If she does not sense every nice relation between text and the score as her Italian colleagues are certain to do, vocally she is in the fore. From her very first notes one felt a richness in her voice that remained throughout her range, whether she sang brilliantly or the most delicate pianissimo. Her first solo and duet with Rodolfo gave only promise of the artistry of her death scene, superb in its repose. Franco Tafuro came again to sing Rodolfo and was popular at once after his "Che Gelida Manina" when the gallery almost stopped the opera crying for encore. I know scarcely another singing actor who so follows every nuance in the orchestra and reacts so splendidly to every word of his singing partners. Ethel Fox dressed the part of Musetta to her last sou. Her voice is gay, she sings well, and is altogether a fine recruit. Mario Valle's Marcel, Interrante's Schaunard and Mongelli's Colline are well remembered from other years. The quartet with Tafuro knows how to make Boheme live; there has always been a spirit of youth in their performance that no other company has ever attained. Cervi gave two of his various characterizations as Benoit, the landlord, and as Alcindoro, the foolish lover.

Among the chorus were all the familiar faces that we shall be happy to watch during the week. Tonight Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" will be sung.

"MY MARYLAND BEGINS SECOND WEEK IN ALVIN

"My Maryland," the operetta with Barbara Frietchie and Civil War background, opened the second week of its engagement in the Alvin last night, when another large audience enjoyed the singing of the principals and the big soldier boy and Southern belle choruses.

ALDINE OFFERS DANCE ACT

Jimmy Savo, who many will recall for his "slow-motion" antics on the musical comedy stage, is with us again. He opened a week's engagement as one of the features on the Aldine vaudeville bill yesterday. Jimmy is the same old Jimmy—and so is much of his presentation, but he and it get the laughs just the same. Jimmy is an old friend, so to speak, thus he gets mention first. Honors also belong to Braile and Pallo, dancers. This pair give an Apache dance and an Egyptian adagio which are the finest of their type seen here in some time. Mel Elwood and the Yugo-Slav-Royal Orchestra assist them. Page, whose dialect makes you think of Jack Pearl, assisted by Shaw, amuses with a comedy skit, "Separation." Bert Grant and Lillian Dailey offer a song presentation. Grant is a composer of popular songs. Performing seals add more variety to the bill. The photoplay feature is "Cheating Cheaters," based on the stage success of that name. The picture has many funny situations and a crook atmosphere. It concerns a group of jewel thieves who masquerade as members of a fashionable family of wealth. Betty Compson is the star and she is supported by a talented cast. Short screen features are on the bill.

CLARA BOW PICTURE CURRENT IN CAMEO

Clara Bow, in a reissue of her Universal picture, "Wine," made in the days before Elinor Glyn designated her as "It," is being shown this week in the Cameo. Miss Bow is first seen as an unsophisticated debutante. Then comes her transition into a woman of worldly sophistication, brought about through her aristocratic father's allegiance with a bootleg ring. The cast includes Huntley Gordon, Myrtle Stedman, Forrest Stanley, Robert Agnew and Walter Lang. Another "Collegian's" film and news pictures are shown.

Nature's Remedy for High Blood Pressure and Rheumatism

For nearly every human ailment nature provides a remedy. In the case of high blood pressure, quick relief is actually found in drinking the waters of famous health springs which stimulate the functions of the liver and intestines and thus eliminate poisonous elements which cause the trouble.

Now you can enjoy this same natural treatment at home at trifling expense. Lithuric Salts, a new compound which may be obtained of any druggist, contains the concentrated salts of the greatest health springs and in addition the fruit acids of lemons and grapes. It stimulates or assists all organs of elimination and quickly removes body poisons. It neutralizes uric acid and increases the alkalinity of the blood and is good not only for high blood pressure but rheumatism as well. Lithuric Salts contains no soddium chloride or sugar, and is, therefore, harmless. Get a package at any May Drug Co. store, or of any other good druggist today and see how much better it will make you feel—almost at once.

dditional Stage and Screen News

aton on Stage and Screen in Penn

uster Keaton on the screen, in ollege," and Buster Keaton, "in rson" on the stage, are the fea-res in the Penn this week. ollege" is a comedy in which eaton appears as a clumsy boy ho tries to "make" the various hletic teams of the college he ttends and his attempts at pole aulting, hurdling and the like are ery funny. In the end the training comes in handy, for, after winning the boat race as a comedy oxswain, he sprints swiftly, hurdles hedges and pole-vaults into a second story window to rescue his girl, who has been imprisoned by a cad. In his stage act he does a burlesque of a Salome dance in which his skill as a real acrobat is displayed. The orchestral overture, "Glowworm," is accompaniment to a ballet, acrobatic dancing by Howell and Harger and a novel rose garden scene, in which Virginia Futrelle and six girls sing. M-G-M News and an organ selection complete the program, which is pleasing throughout.

Gayety Presents Review Type Show

"Burlesque a la Carte" was presented in the Gayety yesterday. It is a production of the review type, with the chorus and principals in musical numbers alternating with comedy skits of various themes, none especially delicate. Estelle Nack, a dancing sprite, helped to make the show lively. Comedy parts were taken care of indifferently by Wayne McVeigh and Bill McCoy, who also did singing and dancing specialties, and Lou Newman. Jack Figaro and Marie Breen played the "straight" parts in the sketches. The piece is in two acts, the first having ten scenes and the second six.

Minstrel Show Feature in Sheridan

Dan Fitch and his 20 minstrel men topped the vaudeville in the Sheridan Square last night, Fitch and Frank Quinn acting as end men in the first part. In the olio the Jordan Brothers danced their way into immediate favor. Fitch's Florida Ramblers played tunes that only minstrel bands can play; Fitch and Quinn appeared in a specialty, "This and That," and and the Harmony Aces, quartet of the organization, had to respond to encores. The photoplay feature was Dolores Costello in "The College Widow," a screen version of George Ade's play. William Collier, Jr., was in her support. "Football Scenes," a screen novelty, also was shown. A special feature was Hallowe'en doings on the stage and prizes were awarded to "mummers" for costumes.

PATRICIA PITT'S NIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Debutantes Look Forward to First Tuesday Cotillion, Set for Night of December

AS FAR back as I can remember the debutantes have looked forward eagerly to the Tuesday cotillions and saved one of their best frocks for such an occasion, for the buds of the season are the honor guests. In fact the cotillions are designed to entertain all the younger set. And now the date is definitely set for the first cotillion, the night of December 13. The other date, tentatively set for January 3, is rather problematical because of the crowded holiday calendar of events designed for the young folk and in honor of the debs.

The marriage last spring of Benjamin Franklin Jones III and Katharine White Holdship has drawn Mr. Jones into the ranks of the young Benedicts and off the cotillion committee of which he has been the moving spirit for a good many years. And the marriage this month of Alan Magee Scaife and Sarah Cordelia Mellon will remove another very active member. Mr. Scaife will be replaced, I hear, by his brother, J. Verner Scaife, Jr., but no successor to Mr. Jones has yet been named.

As [illegible] tand now, the committee includes Moorhead Benezet Holl[illegible] [illegible]ard King Mellon, John H. Ricketson III, who was ad[illegible] group just a year or two ago, and the younger Mr. S[illegible]

[illegible] debut tea of pretty little Florence Wainwright, to be [illegible] by her mother, Mrs. Harris Ewalt Wainwright on Friday [illegible] 4 to 6 o'clock in her Beechwood boulevard home, is going to be, I predict, one of the outstanding debutante parties of the year.

Mrs. Wainwright has asked a large group of women to assist her at the tea. Included in her aides are several women who will entertain later for the debutante. Among these is another daughter, Mrs. Albert Horne Burchfield, Jr., who will be in the receiving line.

Besides Mrs. Burchfield, Jr., the aides will be Mrs. Thomas Grant McCutcheon, Mrs. Rebekah McCutcheon Dallmeyer, Mrs. William C. King, Mrs. Edwin Stanton Fickes, Mrs. William Loftus Monro, Mrs. James Duncan Munroe, Mrs. Harry Schuyler Nicholson, Mrs. John Hancock Nicholson, Mrs. Harry Howard Patterson, Mrs. James H. Patterson, Mrs. Norwood Johnston, Mrs. Charles Howard Johnston, Mrs. James W. Macfarlane, Mrs. Albert Horne Burchfield, Mrs. Charles D. Marshall, Miss Abigail Wainwright, Mrs. Frank S. Love and Mrs. Edward B. Goehring.

Of course Florence will have aides, too, including some of her co-debutante friends. Among them are Marjorie Babcock, Janet McKinney, Virginia Louise Johnston, Mary Louise Johnson, Suzanne Trimble, Florence Carroll, Frances Fitzgerald, Anne Louise Marshall, Mary Mellon McClung and Margaret Brainard.

Only relatives and a few intimates attended the wedding of Miss Ada Dorothy Meckelnburg and Frank J. Authenreith, which took place at 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the parlors of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Bellevue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ralph B. Urmy before a bank of ferns and yellow and white chrysanthemums. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Robert Boyd Meckelnburg, wore a gown of white satin with tulle veil and head band of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses and valley lilies and wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Janet Meckelnburg, as her sister's maid of honor, wore canary yellow georgette and velvet, with hat and shoes to match, and carried rose-colored ragged dahlias. Paul Authenreith was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Frederick Meckelnburg, a brother of the bride, and Donald Hazelett, of Telicavia. The wedding dinner was served in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Authenreith left for a motor trip through the East, after which they will be at home in the Loutellus apartments, East End.

Among the out-of-town guests was the bride's sister, Miss Eleanor Meckelnburg of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Meckelnburg of Warren.

FIRST IN RED CROSS DRIVE

MRS. COOLIDGE JOINS.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, whose husband, you know, did not choose, is the first lady of the land again—this time the first one to subscribe to the American National Red Cross as it opens its annual drive for members. John Barton Payne, president of the National Red Cross, is pinning the organization emblem on Mrs. Coolidge at the White House.

MISS NEWSOM DELIGHTS VALLEY CLUB MEMBERS

A young woman over whose cradle many fairies must have bent, so numerous are her gifts, came to Sewickley yesterday and gave an hour of sheer delight to the Sewickley Valley Woman's Club. The gifted young person was Miss Frances Newsom, of New York, whose voice alone would seem to be sufficient for one small person. But not only has Miss Newsom an exquisite, velvety, soprano of flexibility, warmth and range, but she has beauty of face and figure as well, and, to top it all, exhibits a stage presence of great charm and grace. From her very first song (which was Donizetti's "Regnava nel silenzio" from "Lucia") through a group of German songs, another of Russian and several English to the concluding "songs of childhood," Miss Newsome pleased her audience mightily. Her lieder—Schumann, Reger, Franz and Brahms compositions—were things to dream dreams over and her children's songs were bright bits of joy. It would be quite impossible to differentiate in the merit of her interpretations, but certainly none was lovelier than her "Maria Wiegenlied" of Reger's.

The program was an auspicious opening of the club's season and was held, as are all the Valley club's meetings, in the Edgeworth Club. It also marked the reception for the re-elected president, Mrs. Ralph W. Harbison. Mrs. Harbison and the other officers received together in the early part of the afternoon and, to conclude, there was the tea hour with some very dainty decorations on the tea tables where four juniors, Mrs. James Crossan Chaplin III, Mrs. Charles Arrott, Mrs. Joseph Porter and Mrs. Lawrence C. Woods, presided. The juniors had charge and were assisted by all the senior committee members. About 300 women were present.

Plans are about complete for the annual convention of the National Congress of the Daughters of American Pioneers, which will be held here Thursday. Only four chapters will be represented, Bentleyville, Parkersburg, Pasadena and the Keystone, the last named being the local and hostess chapter.

The morning will be spent at the international art exhibit and upon the conclusion of the visit luncheon will be served at the Congress of Clubs. The business session will take place in the clubhouse during the afternoon and Mrs. Frank Sumney, of Dravosburg, will have charge of a program of entertainment. Mrs. Dulcie Fiske Fairman is to give a short talk and there will be music. Mrs. Sumney will sing Thursday night at the reception which Mrs. Thomas P. Fleeson, president general, will give at her home in South Graham street. Mrs. Robert M. Ewing will direct the evening's program which, in addition to Mrs. Sumney's solos, will include readings.

The musical portion of the program presented yesterday before the Pittsburgh Literary and Musical Club was by Miss Marjorie Bell Pyfer and Miss Ruth Simons, who gave piano solos, and Mrs. J. B. Shaw, whose contralto numbers were accompanied by Miss Simons. For the literary numbers, Mrs. Adele Eggers Furniss, president of the club, had a paper on "Early Christianity," Miss Lillian O. Sprague another on "Picturesque Italian Traits," and Mrs. George B. Mattingley read from a magazine article on "Rebuilding Rome in a Day."

The Presbyterian Hospital Aid Society held a luncheon today in the University Club. The Rev. Dr. Stuart Nye Hutchison made the opening prayer, contralto solos were presented by Mrs. Rose Leader Chislett and an address was made by the Rev. Dr. William L. McEwan, president of the Hospital Association. Plans for the annual donation day, November 17, were announced.

Dr. Florence M. Teagarden, of the University of Pittsburgh, will speak Saturday at the meeting of the Child Study Class of Rodef Shalom Sisterhood. "Character: What Factors Determine it," is the subject to be discussed.

A splendid musical program is being arranged by Mrs. J. Smith Christy, of the Tuesday Musical Club, for the annual donation day reception of the Florence Crittenton Home Thursday. The board of managers will receive the guests both afternoon and evening and in the afternoon there will be brief speeches by various directors and officers and readings by Miss Florence Bollen. The musical program, which is to be given at night, will be presented by Mrs. Ruth Bowers Gibson, violinist, and a quartet composed of Mr. and Mrs. C. Fred Newman, Mrs. Letha Frazier Rankin and John Dickson, with Mrs. Fred A. Harvey accompanying.

Two luncheons were held at the Congress of Clubs yesterday, one under auspices of the program committee, of which Mrs. W. C. McClure is chairman, and the other under the membership committee, with Mrs. John Howard Phillips as chairman. At the former, Dr. George S. Arundale and his wife, from India, spoke and Mrs. Helen Hunt Allen, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Ruth Glasser Beismeyer, played. There was the usual enthusiasm at the membership luncheon. Russell Mitchell, of the Post-Gazette, spoke on salesmanship.

More than 100 members and their guests attended the president's day reception held yesterday in the College Club by the Pittsburgh Female College Association in honor of Mrs. John A. Wilson. A reading of Longfellow's "Hanging of the Crane," with a musical setting written by Mrs. F. F. Rohrer was offered as the chief feature of the program by Mrs. Lester K. Sprowls, who gave one or two other numbers.

OIL CITY, Pa., Nov. 1.—Petroleum producers of this section have filed a protest with the Interstate Commerce Commission against the proposed reduction of freight rates on petroleum and petroleum products from western points to places east of the Mississippi. The reduced rates, they hold, would result in disastrous competition with the mid-continent fields.

"ASK ME ANOTHER" FASHION QUESTIONS

By Sarah Van Rensselaer

Dear Miss Van Rensselaer:
Why is it that the glove silk underwear that I have purchased at reliable stores shrinks badly and loses body after washing and lasts no time at all?
Oil City, Pa. G. S. W.

The answer is simple. Many manufacturers use a minimum quality of silk and load it with a solution that gives a lustrous finish, body and apparent strength to the new garment. But, once washed this "loading" disappears and you have a bedraggled bit of glove silk left, half the original weight and so thin it couldn't possibly resist wear. My advice to you is to buy Italian* Silk Underwear which is 100% pure silk. S. V. R.

MELLON FIGHTS NEW ROAD PLAN

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has let it be known that he is opposed to the proposal recently put forward by officials of the newly organized American Motorists' Association that proceeds of the foreign debt be used for financing a comprehensive Federal road building program.

From the manner in which the proposal was frowned upon at the Treasury it was evident that Mr. Mellon will not approve any plan for diverting foreign debt payments from the present practice of reducing war obligations.

Officials of the new motor body, which is a rival outfit to the American Automobile Association, have started an agitation in favor of legislation authorizing use of the funds in a Federal highway project to include all of the states. A great system of hard-surfaced roads would be constructed from coast to coast, each state being allotted funds in accordance with the amount of government bonds subscribed to during the war.

Objection has been raised to the suggestion on the grounds that some of the states would benefit more than others, although their highway programs are much more advanced.

SAY CITY BOSSES HERD WORKERS

City employes have been given "orders" to attend meetings "boosting the machine candidates for county commissioners," Jacob Yeager charged today, speaking at the noon meeting in the McGovern-Shields headquarters, 328 Fourth avenue.

"The command to city employes to appear at meetings in this fight for county commissioners is proof of the vicious interlocking of machine politics in city and county," said Yeager, in his denunciation of the Republican Party. "No further demonstration is required of the desperate attempt of the crew of the old reliable machine to halt the onward march of the independent movement."

DAMAGE SUIT CAPIAS ISSUED

A capias was issued yesterday for John R. Walsh, defendant in a $50,000 damage suit instituted by Mrs. Frances Hubert. Walsh is accused of knocking Mrs. Hubert down, when his automobile jumped the curb, in front of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association Building, December 26, seriously injuring her. Her attorney said he had information that Walsh was to leave the county and Judge Ambrose B. Reid signed an order requiring Walsh to furnish $1,000 bail for his presence in court, when the trial is held.

MUSIC
BEGGAR'S OPERA
Carnegie Music Hall

James Bortz presented the first of his unusual series of musical entertainments in Carnegie Music Hall last evening before a crowded house. The Beggar's Opera, though written two centuries ago, was played for the first time in this city. One can hardly imagine that when first produced in New York in 1751 many protested against the "godless thing" and threatened to have the law on the managers. How nicely tame we now find this work of John Gay, who reflected the musical thoughts of Dr. Arne and Purcell during England's best musical period, together with the literary thoughts of Dean Swift and Pope.

The story deals with the love affairs of a handsome highwayman Macheath, his dual marriage with Polly Peacham and Lucy Lockit, his escapades in and out of prison. There is every opportunity in the loosely made plot to introduce charming dances and choruses, and to make what the twentieth century has named wisecracks, alias satire on the acting, singing and morals of the day. The scenery was very well managed on the music hall stage, and the costumes, designed by C. Lovat Fraser, most delicately colored.

The musical score used last night was arranged from original texts by Frederick Austin. The laurels of the performance must come to the ladies' orchestra and the musical director, Sebastian Unglada. There was a harpsichord, viola d'amore, cello, viola di gamba, bass, flute and oboe, an ensemble so deftly handled that one was frequently distracted from the voices and compelled to listen to as fine chamber music as one could wish. From my records I could find but few members of the original company present. Sylvia Nelis has lost in volume of voice, but still sings with much ease. Celia Turrill furnished life to music that was beginning to fatigue the audience by the third act. Her singing showed long experience, and her acting was marked by its subtle sense of farce. George Baker's Macheath leaned towards comedy rather than romance, was never overplayed and always musical. Alfred Heather as Filch was an old-timer, too. The chorus of men were not as successful as the chorus of townswomen, but their dances were always attractive.

Carnegie Hall cannot give the atmosphere of the old Lyric in Hammersmith, but we were able again to hear music that was made when composers were not yet afraid to write a melody.

Whereas A Girl Risks Her All To Get A Rich Society Husband

by Gilber Rogers

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

MARGIE MARSH comes to New York with $1,000 and a wonderful education. She keeps house with four other girls, learns stenography, and decides after three years to marry. She fails to find her ideal, and Dan Shevlin, a shrewd man of the world, offers to introduce her into smart society through a Mrs. Brooke, provided Margie will give him some security. This security consists of a note which he dictates and Margie recklessly signs, to the effect that she loves him and will never regret the six months she has spent with him. Through Mrs. Brooke she buys wonderful clothes which Shevlin pays for. Mrs. Brooke opens her cottage in Newport and Margie meets her brother, Mark Trelaw, a cripple. Margie scores a success with rich Tubby Wells, and discovers he is secretly married. This information proves of great interest to Shevlin. Margie wishes she had never given him that compromising letter. She overhears Mrs. Brooke talking to Shevlin and has a vague feeling that she has gotten herself into evil company. Mrs. Brooke confesses that she is in Shevlin's power, and Tubby Wells invites Margie on board his yacht. She goes in her bathing suit; he makes violent love to her, and to escape him she dives off the boat, realizes she cannot reach shore and is rescued by Jerry. He tells her he is mad about her, but he hasn't got a nickel and swears he will try to make some money somehow and plan to meet her next morning. She realizes she has fallen desperately in love with him. Shevlin tells her he has picked up a rich prospects for her, Adrian Martin. She wonders how she is going to tell him about Jerry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

JUST a young man—without a nickel—but with friendly, frank eyes, a straight way of looking at you, talking to you, the kind of man who took care of you—how could she help loving him? And if he had been none of those things, how could she help loving him anyway?

What a fool she really had been! Just a thorough-going idiot, thinking she could be an adventuress, thinking she could coolly pick out the wealthiest man available—and marry him. Adrian Martin—this unknown Martin—or Tubby Wells—why, the thought itself was sickening.

Only, how was she going to tell Dan Shevlin? How was she going to say, "I don't want to go on. I want you to call our agreement off. I want to pay you back—every penny—later on."

Shevlin fingered the stem of his wine glass, as he glanced about with his hard, alert eyes that missed nothing, a stream of sharp, stinging banter pouring from him. And Margie knew it was not going to be easy.

But that wasn't what worried her really. It was Jerry, Jerry himself. He loved her a little, she thought with an intake of breath. A little—and she could do a lot with a little love. She had to make him care, had to, had to. Else why live at all. Anyway, no matter what might happen, she must get free from Shevlin's schemes. She must get free now, right away.

Coffee—served in little filigree cups of silver—in the drawing room, and Mrs. Brooke desperately anxious to get rid of her.

"I ought to go. I ought to go upstairs and read," Margie told herself. "I ought to lie down with a book and—and think about Jerry. But—act quickly. Get things done. Don't wait or hesitate. Get things done now!"

Shevlin, wound up, thoroughly enjoyed himself. "Adrian Martin," he murmured. "To think he didn't pop into my head right away. Of course you may make no effect, but there's something about you . . . I don't know . . . Now, if I were only rich enough myself . . ."

He grinned, and took in the wince of Carlotta Brooke out of the corner of his eye. Cruel, deliberately cruel, for the sheer pleasure of it. Hateful, really, Margie felt. It didn't matter what you said or did to a man like that. Bad all through. And once upon a time when he had strolled in through the elaborate offices of the Pantheon Finance Company, she had thought he was amusing. Amusing! She hated him now for hurting Carlotta.

"Adrian Martin—what a man. Collects pearls and beautiful women. Has had strings of both. Rather a Turk, but even Turks have their little weaknesses. Brilliant devil, too. If you'll believe it, he's even more brilliant than I am!"

The tinkle of a telephone, a servant at the doorway, and Carlotta was called away. Margie was alone with Dan. Do it now, say it and be done with it now!

"I've something to tell you, Mr. Shevlin. No use beating about the bush. I don't think I want to go on—with this plan—any longer." Stilted the words sounded, and flat and mechanical her voice came back to her, like a child reciting . . . "You know—about marrying money. I made a mistake, I guess. Of course, I'll pay you back every cent I've cost you. You'll let me know just how much, and I'll pay as quick as I can."

"Oh!" A short, sardonic ejaculation, a long cool glance, then the lean fingers lighting a cigaret. "Hasn't occurred to you, I suppose, that I might not care to let you back out?"

Margie's eyes flashed. Oh, if he wanted war, very well. She no longer felt unjust, or a quitter, she wanted to beat him.

"Let me? How could you stop me?"

His searching gaze on her, his malevolent half smile. Then he surprised her. He did the one thing she did not expect. His manner grew suddenly bland, mild, propitiatory.

"Just as you say, how could I . . ." His voice drawled away. Margie remembered for a desperate heartbeat that letter she had foolishly given him, that letter in which she had proclaimed to anyone who cared to read that this man had been her lover, her "protector." Had he forgotten? Did he ever forget anything? It couldn't be that. Perhaps he wasn't quite as cruel as he looked. She felt her anger going out like a tide. Why, she'd almost lost her temper!

"Yes, how could I?" he asked, almost meditatively. "Oh, well!" He got up, walked to the window, looked out, turned suddenly. "See here, do me a little favor. Get to know this new man I'm talking about, this Adrian Martin. Get to know him. Make him like you—if you can. Don't think that's so easy, either. He's just a little too jaded to fall like Tubby Wells. But try. Do that for me. Then we'll shake hands and say goodby."

"Why? But why do you want me to—'

"That's a little secret of my own. I'm simply asking you a favor—after all, you owe me one, too."

Margie could have resisted many things, but not an appeal like that. Meet this man, get to know him, try to make him like her—now that she had met Jerry? And yeet, if she did go now, if she did refuse, how could she see Jerry anyway? It wasn't as if he loved her desperately, would follow her anywhere. She might—she might go away, and just never see him anymore!

She tried to be honest. "I do owe you a favor. But I—I wouldn't do this one, if it weren't that I've reasons of my own—also."

He bent a frowning gaze on her. "Oh," he said dryly. "So that's it, is it? . . . I thought so." What did he mean? He'd found out about Jerry, read her heart and thoughts? But that would be impossible. No, he must mean something else. Yet, his eyes looked so clever. He knew things about women—he was clever about women, too clever.

Carlotta was back in the room. No need to stay now. Margie rose, murmured an excuse, started up the stairs. She would stay on for another week, for two weeks perhaps, see Jerry again and again and again. And as for this Adrian Martin—why, she could lunch with him, chat with him once or twice, perhaps. That was all Shevlin asked. A pity if she couldn't do that. She did owe him something. Why, in a way, she owed him Jerry. She wouldn't have met Jerry if he hadn't given her the chance to come here.

At the head of the stairs on the dark landing, a silent, thin figure, Margie gave a little gasp. Mark Trelaw, Mrs. Brooke's brother, with his withered arm, listening there, eavesdropping.

He put out his hand. "Don't," he said in a low voice.

"What do you mean?"

"Get out of here—while you can—don't believe anything he says. I'm telling you the truth."

He did not wait for an answer, but turned and went down the hallway with his shoulders bent in the way he had, and his head carried forward.

Trying to scare her . . . just listening and hating everybody . . . crippled . . . it didn't mean anything. She hummed as she went into her room as if to hide the curious dread in her heart.

CHAPTER XVII.

SEVEN O'CLOCK, and a grey morning with rain dripping from the eaves, and all the leaves of the trees outside her window glistening with wetness.

She gazed solemnly at the phone that stood on the bed table within reach. Just a black stalk of hard rubber, a little metal, and cloth and wire. Yet 10 o'clock would be here, and at 10 o'clock that phone would become alive, would carry Jerry Evesham's voice.

WILSON'S GREATEST RICHES HIS FRIENDSHIPS

☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆ ☆

His Crusade for Democracy in University Life Tested Them—Mistakes and Misunderstandings Costly

It was explained in yesterday's installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" in the Sun-Telegraph that Wilson regarded the democratizing of community life at Princeton as in the nature of a national problem. This strengthened his determination to establish the quad system. A great storm of opposition broke around him. The struggle to carry his point was one of the most exciting in college history.

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

Woodrow Wilson and Dean West

AMONG members of the board of trustees both David B. Jones and his brother, Thomas D. Jones, who became a trustee in 1908, were both firm supporters of Wilson throughout his life. Cyrus H. McCormick, C. C. Cuyler and Edward W. Sheldon, his classmates, could be steadily counted upon and in all the earlier years M. Taylor Pyne, also a graduate of Princeton and one of the generous supporters of the university, was Wilson's devoted friend.

As a matter of fact, Wilson's support throughout by those trustees who understood best what he was trying earnestly to do was not short of remarkable. No man was ever richer in his friendships than Woodrow Wilson!

But the way of the man of vision is hard, whether he be a crusader with a new plan, an inventor with a new telescope or a poet with a new message.

Andrew C. Imbrie, a new member, conferred with friends of the university and sent Wilson a long list of questions on July 25, 1907. They were intelligent and penetrating, going quite thoroughly to the heart of the matter and drawing out Wilson's thoughts on it in an admirable way.

Wilson's reply was so complete, so definite, that it left no doubt as to the thoroughness of his thinking upon the subject, but that very fact only served to make the proposal still more distasteful to those who were opposed to any change.

Wilson wrote many other letters that summer, vigorously meeting misunderstandings and misrepresentations. He resisted especially the charges that he had accused the clubs of dissolute conduct, that he was unwilling to discuss other plans, that he was set upon driving his proposal through without adequate discussion.

The Rosenbaum Company

Advertisement appears today on page 3 of this section where it will be published hereafter.

"I can assure you," he wrote to H. Howard Armstrong, September 3, "that no haste will be made in carrying out these plans and that an abundance of time will be allowed for a very full and thorough understanding and discussion of the whole matter before any step is taken. That has been our purpose from the first, and I have been expecting to devote this next winter to discussing the matter with anyone who cares to discuss it with me. You need not fear that the alumni will not be given abundant opportunity to express their views."

Alumni Support Lacking

But the tide was strong against him. He did not receive the support he expected from the alumni. It seemed that they did not really want to understand him!

The fact was that the Princeton following, intensely as it admired Wilson, much as it appreciated what he had already done, clearly as it perceived the evils he was seeking to cure, was a little out of breath. Wilson was assuming a discipline of mind, a devotion to purpose, equal to his own. He had already asked much of his more or less easy-going little world. He had pegged up the requirements of scholarship; he was demanding an unprecedented amount of work of students, and indeed of faculty and trustees.

If some of Wilson's best friends who believed utterly that he was right were hesitant about pressing the matter too hard—"We dearly love Woodrow Wilson, but he does drive too fast"—his opponents were attacking his plans without gloves. Two general lines of opposition, as ancient as the struggle of the innovator to correct the evils of society, at once developed:

First, the proposed remedy in itself was all wrong.

Second, the methods of the reformer were all wrong.

One of the earliest and strongest attacks was from those who believed that the private property rights and privileges of the clubs were sacred—superior even to what Wilson called the "primary purpose of the university."

Probably the deepest opposition of all came from those who resented what they considered an attempt to dictate how students "should arrange their social life." As crudely put, "no one can make a gentleman associate with a mucker." Again Wilson argued patiently but unavailingly:

"The primary object that the board has in view is not social; indeed, that is not its chief object. The object is academic and intellectual. We are seeking the organization best suited to the intellectual development of the university, its development as a place of serious study. I should be distressed to have the plan regarded as in any sense an attack on the clubs. It would have been proposed, even if there had been no clubs, as a desirable method of drawing the undergraduates together in an academic organization."

In short, in his single-minded devotion to what he considered the prime purpose of a university—the "things of the mind," the "discipline of the spirit"—Wilson found himself facing every ancient bogey of progress; vested property rights, ceremonial traditions, social privilege. He was learning fast in this little world of the university—lessons he needed in preparation for what was coming in state and nation.

While these elements lay solidly behind the opposition, the safest strategy of attack, as always, was indirect—upon the method of the reformer. He was "too drastic," "too dictatorial," he "was not conciliatory enough," he "recommended common counsel, but did not practice it," he did not enough consult the faculty, the trustees, the alumni, the students. He should have "delayed," taken it more coolly. In short, he should have cured deep-seated evils without hurting any one's feelings, endangering any property rights, interfering with any social privileges!

No doubt mistakes were made. Wilson was human. He was too impatient with dullness; he was so swift and clear in his own mental processes that he did not explain enough, and half-measures—"feeble passes"—irritated him sharply.

"The intensity of his conviction of a certain duty as God gave him to see it sometimes prevented him from envisaging other things. If this be a fault, it is one which has been shared by many noble characters," wrote Dr. Henry van Dyke to Dr. E. A. Alderman in 1924.

While the first strong reaction to the quad proposals was naturally from those most nearly affected—the students and the alumni—the same sharp discussion was also going on in the faculty, the members of which knew the actual conditions better than any outsider. Here the lines drawn were clear and definite—and it is significant that an overwhelming majority, as will be shown, stood with Wilson.

With the coming of the fall term in 1907 the faculty found itself divided into strongly antagonistic factions. Each began to hold meetings, discuss plans of action. The group which supported Wilson was led by Profs. Daniels, Ormond, Vreeland, Elliott and Axson. Dean Fine was the backbone of the movement. That opposed to Wilson was led by Dr. Henry van Dyke, Dean West and, presently, by Wilson's most intimate friend, Prof. Hibben.

Van Dyke was prompt and outright in his opposition.

"I feel bound to tell you, personally, of my profound regret at hearing that the assential idea of the plan of residential quads for Princeton must be understood as already adopted. It is the 'essential idea' that makes the radical change—a change which seems to me full of the gravest perils to the life and unity of Princeton," he wrote to Wilson.

A few days later Van Dyke wrote an article condemning the scheme. His opposition was based not upon expediency, but upon contrary judgement as to the results that would accrue and the absence of need for such a reorganization. It was based on sound conviction, and while the president could not accept his reasoning, he respected Van Dyke's judgment in the matter.

West Writes to Wilson

West might be expected to be of the opposition, for the quad plan, if carried through, was likely to interfere with the plans for the graduate college. But West did not take the outright stand of Van Dyke. He charged high-handed action. In a letter to Wilson he said:

"The sweeping and unexpected action of the board of trustees regarding the residential reorganization of our students—an action taken at your instance and without allowing any opportunity beforehand for hearing the opilnon of the faculty or of other persons properly interested and deeply concerned—has so disheartened me that I have been unable to think of anything else or to shake off the feeling of disma [illegible] the troubles ahead of us.

"You have been president for [illegible] eventful and useful years, and [illegible] measure of your administration [illegible] had my unwavering adhesion [illegible] best efforts—even to the poin[illegible] sending me to the hospital. I h[illegible] served Princeton and your admi[illegible]tration for something more than [illegible]ary and office. If the spirit of Prin[illegible]ton is to be killed, I have little [illegible]terest in the details of the funeral."

While no man consulted the facu[illegible] less in advance regarding his pl[illegible] than Dean West, his letter represe[illegible]ed the strong feeling engendered. W[illegible]son replied immediately, July 11, 19[illegible]

"I have just received your letter [illegible] the 10th, and have read it with de[illegible] distress. I am sorry, very sorry, t[illegible] you did not say these things t[illegible] me before I left Princeton. It is only i[illegible] conversations that misconceptions [illegible] deep as yours can be removed.

"I can assure you that you are e[illegible]tirely mistaken in saying, or in su[illegible]posing, 'unconstrained discussion [illegible] the essentials of the plan by the f[illegible]ulty has now made it utterly imp[illegible]sible,' and that if you had waited, with some confidence in my character, until the autumn, you would have seen how wholly gratuitous and unfounded such a statement is. Certainly there is no plan, or purpose, or possibility of 'killing the spirit of Princeton.' I really cannot imagine what you mean. You must be s[illegible]ing out of some extraordinary [illegible] conception of the whole idea and pu[illegible]pose.

"The plan involves so many elements which lie within the province and authority of the board alone that it seemed to me imperative that it should first receive the sanction of the trustees. No one who candidly considers its scope and character can fail to see that. But the board intended, as I of course did, that the freest possible discussion should follow; and it is to follow, in order that every element of common counsel may contribute to the final decision.

"A frank conference with me would have saved you much of the distress you are now laboring under. At this distance we can only say that a little patience, a little unexcited talking will bring things, for you and for all others who have misunderstood both its character and its method, into a new light."

How the whole country came to be interested in Woodrow Wilson's Princeton controversies will be shown in tomorrow's chapter.

Margie Wonders How Shevlin Can Be Cast Aside; She Meets Adrian Martin

mental all the way—it was fun, though you wouldn't ever tell anyone what you thought or felt. She loitered through breakfast. Mrs. Brooks came down late, and was cross and gave her short answers. Oh well, just a mood. Margie was determinedly meek.

Dan Shevlin was gone again. He'd left before midnight, to drive on a clear road back to town, to drive all night. These sudden comings and goings, this air of hurried and intense business, with the business itself shrouded in secrecy—what did it all mean? But at least he was gone, would be gone for another week. Margie breathed easier somehow, knowing that.

She wandered through the delicate Colonial house, looking at things with a sense of sad pleasure. She would say goodby to them so soon, these lovely, fragile things, this exquisite life in which one had only to ask to be given. You dropped a handkerchief. A silent servant restored it.

You read on the window seat, and left books and magazines where they were, knowing invisible fingers would rearrange them. You returned to find your bedroom fresh and sweet, with clothes laid out, others taken for pressing or care. You went to meals, never knowing what new special thing would be served [illegible] the kitchen. You hadn't [illegible] time for all the pleasures [illegible] held for you.

And thinking of these things, Margie felt that the miracle was [illegible]at she was turning her back [illegible] for something definite, [illegible]mething certain. She was turning her back on them on the mere chance that Jerry Evesham might care enough. . . . If he didn't, well she didn't want anything at all then.

Five minutes, four minutes of 10, 10 itself. She stared at the phone, her chin in her hands, her big eyes worried. Obstinately the phone gave no sign or sound. It stood there mocking her.

He had forgotten! He didn't care at all. She was throwing away everything for a man who didn't care at all. He'd said things, looked things, and she had believed . . . oh, what hadn't she believed. . . . The phone rang.

He'd make her suffer. She thought: "I'll show him I don't care. I'll pretend I'm a maid, and say I'm not in." She said:

"Jerry, why didn't you call me before?"

"You mean you really wanted me to?"

"Yes. No. That is, I was planning to go out. You see . . . well, you've made me late."

"Then if you're late it doesn't matter. I want to see you. . . . I've been thinking. I'll stop around for you."

"But it's raining."

"Is it? Well, let it rain. Come on!"

There were things to wear, special, gay things, waterproofed silk, a steamer hat that took on any shape you wanted, and all of them nice, high, soft moccasin boots—"just the thing if you go fishing, Madam," the salesman had said.

She threw herself into them, feeling like a man, only not forgetting to snatch up a powder compact at the last moment and drop that into her pockets. She looked at herself in the long mirror, her black hair like a wing under the shadow of the soft hat, her arms thrust into a vivid scarlet coat, and her lips parted, smiling, smiling at life, loving everyone, everything.

"My dear Margie, where are you going? Out? Out? On a day like this. . . . A boy you met? What boy? Don't be mysterious—I can't stand mystery."

"I'll tell you everything—later—for there he is!"

She whipped open the door, and ran down the steps. The ancient Ford, sitting high in the air, rocked under its own emotion, and Jerry's eyes, under the peak of his wet cap, met hers.

He held the door open. She was sitting next to him. With a dizzy lurch they were off, off into the wide sweep of Bellevue, threading their way through the narrow business streets of the New England city, out into a broad, deserted landscape swept by fine rain.

"Where are we going?"

"I don't know."

"Don't you? But you're driving like the wind."

"Anyone who could drive this car like the wind gets a platinum medal. I'm kidnaping you, running off with you for the day, and if you try to jump out, you'll break a leg. You see I—had to see you. Are you angry?"

"No," said Margie. "I'm not angry. But I do wish you'd go slower, because I won't jump out."

Their eyes met in a smile.

"Why did you laugh?" he asked.

"I don't know . . . why did you?"

The rain beat on them, but the earth sent up a fresh, sweet smell, and the air itself was sweet. Fun being with him, fun being with a man who wanted to be with you so much he was willing to kidnap you for the day. Fun being with a man who drove as fast as he could without a destination. Margie's heart sang. She knew she was happy and that she could never be any happier than now, at this golden instant.

Off the state road, they wandered into the real country, and the rain ceased. He slowed down in a village street.

"I'm starving." Nothing in sight but an owl wagon. "Let's try that."

The interior was smokly and Margie sat on a hard little stool that wobbled. "Ham and beans . . . ham and . . ." A fat man in a white apron forked slabs of pie on white plates, poured steaming mugs of coffee.

"Do you mind—do you mind this place?"

"Mind?" Margie said. "Catch me eating anywhere else. Wonderful food. I want some more clam chowder!"

Then they strolled, talking together, about nothing, about everything, staring and being stared at, until they came to the last of the houses and crossed a meadow and came to a fence. He lifted her over, but he did not release her.

"I'm mad about you," he said thickly. "I never wanted money before. Now I've got to have it, got to have it!"

"Why?" Margie was trembling.

"For you, of course. Because I'm going to have you. I don't care what you say—"

"I haven't said anything."

He kissed her then, and she shut her eyes, and he kissed each shut eyelid. The tones of his voice now, so low and deep and tender—she loved his voice now. She loved everything that was his, or of him.

"I love you. . . . Do you love me?"

"You know I do."

"But you don't love me, as much as I love you," he declared.

She laughed softly, suddenly, impulsively, put her cheek against his. "I love you so much that anything you say or think or do I believe is right. When did you love me?"

"All my life."

"But we met scarcely two weeks ago."

"I know, but I wasn't alive until I met you." He put his arms around her more tightly. "Listen, I've got to go to New York—right away—for about a week. I'll be back as soon as I can. I want to see if I can land a better job. It'll have to be South America—for a year, I'm afraid. Would you go there with me?"

She answered him with a look, her heart in her eyes. Then she said: "You don't need any better job. I've something to tell you. I—I haven't any money. Not anything at all."

"But—the house you're staying at—the things you wear—"

"Not mine. Nothing's mine. I—I can't tell you now. You see I was someone else two weeks ago, I couldn't do now what I did then. You've made me—yes, different!"

He stared at her, puzzled. Then all at once he drew her tighter in his arms. "Well, I'll try to get that job just the same. When I come back next week, you've got to tell me everything about yourself, Margie—everything! Because you belong to me now—for good."

Like an ugly thought there came into Margie's mind the name of Adrian Martin, the man Dan Shevlin wanted her to meet. She drove it angrily out of head, but the impression remained like a dark cloud in a summer sky.

CHAPTER XVIII.

A WEEK later Margie looked back as if she were looking back across a year.

She had unearthed a calendar, stuck it up over her dressing-table, to watch the days go by, until Jerry returned.

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Noel Veritzen Becomes the Center of an Animated Love Contest by Mary and Eleanor

I MADE a most heroic effort to suppress a smile when Mary told me that nobody else understood Noel as she did. Her boast was so naive, so reflective of feminine vanity in general that it was mirth-provoking in the extreme. I was able to present a perfectly sober face to her, however, and to comment truthfully:

"He is rather inscrutable, I fancy."

"That's because he has so pronounced an inferiority complex," Mary said glibly. "But give me time, and I'll take all that out of him. Haven't you noticed? Don't you think he's lots more aggressive and self-confident than he used to be?"

This time I did not try to conceal a smile.

"He is less reserved, certainly," I said, "but the word 'aggressive'—forgive me, Mary, but I cannot help smiling at that in connection with Noel."

She gave a determined little click of her teeth, looked at me steadily.

"He was aggressive enough one night, to suit anybody," she said significantly. "He suited Jack Leslie almost too well."

"That is true, dear," I admitted, "but that isn't his natural bent. I don't think I should like him aggressive. Look out that when you get him made over, Miss Lincoln doesn't snatch him. She appears to be quite mad upon the subject of the Veritzens, both son and father."

Mary gave a little laugh, which, however, held no particular mirth in it.

"She can have the father if she wants him for all of me," she said. "But, oh, boy! can't you imagine the high-hat Mr. Veritzen would put on if that dame tried to vamp him the way she's doing with Noel. Stage-struck flappers are no novelty in his life."

"That is so, Mary," I acquiesced demurely.

She shot a shrewd glance at me.

"Oh! I admit I was one," she said, "but you don't imagine I have any illusions about the way I got a hearing. If it hadn't been for you and Mrs. Underwood, I'd still be cooling my heels at that school in Detroit or some other one just like it."

"You mean if it hadn't been for Mrs. Underwood," I amended hastily. "I had nothing to do with it."

"No?" Mary's rising inflection and side glance at me held embarrassing raillery. "Oh! of course I know Mrs. Underwood's an old side-kick of his, and that after she saw me dance she persuaded Mr. Veritzen to give me a hearing — and seeing—but who persuaded Mrs. Underwood? Just answer me that."

She rushed over and hugged me impulsively, and I knew that the embrace and hurried hedging concerning my influence with Philip Veritzen had resulted from my involuntary frown at her badinage. But I was more disturbed than I cared to admit even to myself. Was it possible that this child's keen eyes had noticed what I thought was still a troubled secret in my own breast—that the great theatrical producer was singularly indulgent to any suggestion or wish of mine?

The thought remained with me, a troublesome thing, long after Mary, a bit subdued, had gone back to her room. Her arch little air had quickened in me the realization that sooner or later I must face a delicate problem in my relations with my employer—I flushed as I mentally used the word, for it was one which the great producer himself had especially barred from my vocabulary upon one occasion when I spoke of him in that capacity.

"Never use that horrible word again," he said impetuously. "It sounds exactly as if I were a factory boss and you punching a time clock. No, you are my valued associate, the historical authority of my organization—please remember that."

Yete no one knew better than I that when the whim seized Philip Veritzen, he could be as arbitrary as the most arrogant factory boss in the country. I had been made to feel by him more than once that I was punching a time clock in everything but the actual motions.

But Mary's comment had made me realize that it had been a long time since I had seen any trace of arrogance in Philip Veritzen's manner.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which their resolution, industry, wisdom and self-control may nullify some trying and malefic situations. Shun risk in money matters, disputes, and protect employment.

A child born on this day may be headstrong and irascible, provoking discord and inharmony in its home as well as business relations. It should be disciplined in infancy and trained to develop its native industry and steadiness.

DULL TEETH

Clear Up, Shine Like Jewels

Get Pepsodent—Works wonders by clearing film coat from teeth

TEETH seldom are naturally "off color." Most often they're merely coated with a film that forms on teeth and absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. By clearing it off, one's whole appearance may be changed.

Old-type dentifrices failed to remove that film successfully. That's why brushing has failed you. Now leading dentists urge the special film-removing dentifrice, Pepsodent, for this purpose.

Results are quick and surprising. Film coats go. Teeth whiten; sparkle like jewels. Bacteria that thrive in film are combated; tooth decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea thus scientifically fought.

To prove those results, accept 10-day tube free. Or get full-size tube for few cents at your druggist. Do this in fairness to yourself.

Cocoanut-Eating Crabs

ON THE South Sea Islands there lives a variety of crab, the largest in the world. These crabs pick up cocoanuts and dig out the "eyes." Through these holes they extract the meat. Sometimes they smash the nuts to get at the meat.

Love Cool, Yet It May Be Lasting

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHEN a man loves a woman with what he feels is "everlasting love," and the woman has become betrothed to another, possibly through misunderstanding, what is best to do? My correspondent in the following letter, presents this serious problem:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Some of your readers may call this love of mine foolish. But to me, it means everything.

"I am a young man, good-looking, good-natured. I have an education in five languages. I am a writer—a poet—but not in English. I am about to finish a book in my native tongue.

"Just 10 years ago, I fell in love with a girl of my own nationality.

"I took her three times to the theater. One play we saw, I remember, was 'Chu Chin Chow in China.' And we enjoyed it very much—I, especially! But when I called her up the fourth time she refused to accept my invitation and gave some excuse I did not like.

"I became very angry. Since then I have not spoken to her. But I loved her just the same, although I did not make another attempt.

"Two years passed. Her family moved away. A certain rumor about me reached them. This was a lie, but I could not find out the author of the lie.

"I became engaged to a girl of a wealthy and prominent family. I was to receive $50,000 four weeks before our marriage. I didn't need the money and don't need it today.

"I began to realize that money could not make me happy, and four weeks before our wedding day I dropped the entire matter.

"My first love was always on my mind.

"Today I am in business for myself as a broker, although my name is not listed in the books. I am doing very well and making money.

"Last week my sisters met the young woman I love. She told them she is engaged and showed them her ring. She expects to be married next January.

"Will you please publish this letter, with your comments and advice. She reads your column. If she reads this letter I hope she may change her mind. My love for her is everlasting.

"C. B.—POET."

Of course, you were foolish—you realize that, do you not, C. B.?

You allowed your chance of happiness to slip out of your grasp because your silly pride took offense when your friend refused your invitation.

She may have had a good reason for refusing. Why, since you love her, did you not give her the benefit of the doubt and continue to prove yourself a devoted friend?

At best, it was only your self-love, your vanity, that was stung by her refusal. She had shown appreciation of your friendship by accepting three previous invitations of yours. It is in this way, over seeming trifles, that love tragedies so often occur.

If by any chance she loved you, and loves you still, it may not be too late to make an effort to clear away the misunderstanding. Make the attempt for the sake of her happiness as well as your own. If she is planning a loveless marriage—as so many girl do without realizing the gravity of the mistake—there can be no wrong in her breaking such an engagement before it is too late.

Can you not manage to see your former friend for a moment and talk this matter over with her?

You owe her an apology for abruptly breaking off the friendship. If she is happy in her present betrothal, and loves the man she is to marry, you can wish them both well, and efface yourself from the situation by accepting your disappointment with good grace. But you will at least be more content, knowing you made the effort to clear away the misunderstanding between you two.

Since you are poet, I know you understand that love, even unrequited, is life's greatest good. To love with "love everlasting" is a blessed privilege, granted to noble souls, illuminating all of life with peace and joy and achievement.

GRAY HAIR IS EASILY DARKENED

Tells How She Did It With a Home-Made Remedy.

Mrs. E. H. Boots, a well-known resident of Buchanan County, Ia., who darkened her gray hair, made the following statement:

"Anyone can darken their gray or faded hair and look twenty years younger with this simple remedy, which they can mix at home. To half a pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, one small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently. It does not color the scalp, is not greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."

"OLD-FASHIONED HELEN OF TROY!—But Not for Long"

Drawn by

HELEN ARRIVED !!
SHE DASHES
FOR THE BARBER!
THEN ONE OF THOSE, DEAR LITTLE HATS!!
BEHOLD — A FLAPPERETTE! SHE NEVER CHANGED HER DRESS!

IF THE lady whose deliciously beautiful little face once sent forth "a thousand ships" should alight from a taxi in our town this year of grace she would never see a tall building; a roaring airplane in the sky; the breathless traffic; the scuttling motorcycle; the light on Broadway from millions of bulbs—that bath of light that is sometimes more disconcerting to stroll along with your young man in than any sunshine—the rolling of automobiles like the intermigration of millions of big doodle-bugs; none of these sorts of wonders of Nineteen-Twenty-Seven would HELEN OF TROY stub her pink toe and round out her gorgeous eyes staring at! With wonder and envy!

Not at first, NO! That other wonder of Nineteen-Twenty-Seven, the pretty flapper—the word seems to have come to stay—would straight enchant fair Helen's sophisticate attention. With her clever woman's mind she would know herself for old-fashioned! Long hair. Low heels. No chapeau. No fox fur! Oh, Heaven! She had known so well her world of men—and reigned star of beauty over a world of women—would whisper to her surprised and restless soul, "WAIT! You and I, too, shall soon walk forth one of these!"

She would leave a dazed taxi-driver holding in his fist an ancient Trojan coin—solid gold. After first whispering, her dangerous, memorable, dark-blue eyes on his, to tell her, if he please, where she could "buy one of those head-pieces and sandals on spikes."

. . . Then would come the tea-time of another day. And sitting daintily among the rest of the "flapperettes" would be Helen of TROY! Just a very pretty American girl like some million others. All it would have taken to do it would have been the barber-shop; high-heels; a tiny hat; and a fox-fur! She would never have had to change her Greek-Nymph's dress! It was just right.

Care of the Mouth Becoming a New Specialty

ALMOST every month a new profession or a new specialty appears. The latest I know about is called "oralogy." This is the study of the mouth and its ailments. One of its disciples calls it the "science of oral understanding."

If I understand the purpose of the specialists in this line, it is to broaden dentistry by including the antrum, and to give closer attention to the pus infection of the gums and teeth roots. At the same time they are pointing out the relationships of these mouth ailments to many of the breakdowns in the general health.

This is a commendable grouping of physical defects, which is more logical than the combinations which have been effected in some other specialties. As I see it, there is a real place in the medical world for the oralogist.

I have spoken of the "antrum." It will be well to give you some information about this part of the anatomy.

The cheek bone is hollow. The prominent part of the cheek, if you will feel of it, is the outer shell of a cavity which opens into the nose. Certain of the upper teeth have roots which reach right up to the floor of this space. In some people the roots actually stick through the bony floor into the antral cavity itself. In any event, the antrum is a part of the head so closely associated with the teeth that the mouth specialists must never overlook it.

When the antrum becomes infected and crowded full of pus it is a condition which places pressure on sensitive nerves. As a result there is pain which feels exactly like toothache.

Let me recite a personal experience: Some years ago I had a severe cold, which lasted a week or two. Then there developed what I was sure was toothache, although I couldn't tell exactly what tooth was the offender. I went to my dentist, insisting I had a bad tooth. He was equally certain I did not have one. I demanded that he take the filling out of one of the upper teeth to make sure it was not infected. It was wasted effort.

All this happened just at the beginning of the use of the X-ray. In these days X-ray pictures would be taken at once and every dental office is equipped to make them. In that day, however, I had to go to another doctor for the X-ray, which my dental friend said was necessary. It revealed the true condition—a gathering of pus in the antrum.

There is no doubt that the mouth specialist must have knowledge of the antrum, as well as the teeth and gums. Sometimes, too, the saliva glands become diseased. These must be put in condition for the good of the digestion. Not all of dentistry is the tooth. It is not enough to say you have no cavities. They may be stopped up and yet you may have serious trouble in the mouth.

You are an unwise citizen if you neglect the mouth. There are structures here which have everything to do with your comfort and with your health. This isn't all. Neglect of the mouth and its neighboring parts may shorten your life. Make sure everything is right by frequent visits to experts who are trained to recognize and remedy any defects. Early attention is important.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Discontented

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am 24 years of age, and have been going with a young man who is 28 years old, for seven years. I am a blonde, and he is of the dark type, and while we have had quarrels, yet we have never had any which have separated us for any length of time, not even a week. During the past six weeks or so, I have become rather disgusted, not only with myself but with everyone and everything in general. It must be that I have been thinking things over, or have been listening to outsiders, but nevertheless I have been thinking about it a great deal. While I have been going with him for seven years, yet he has never given me an engagement ring, and yet, every one knows I am practically engaged. He says he loves me just as much as I love him, and has never mentioned marriage excepting that he thinks there is plenty of time even after a girl has reached the age of 25 years. I am rather under the impression that his mother and family are keeping him from getting married, in that anything they want, they tell him, and he is always willing to get it for them, although he makes no more than $150 per month. He has two other brothers and a sister, and while the one brother and the sister and father are working, yet it seems that they do not support the family in the way that they should. He has not saved very much money in the seven years that he has been going with me, and what he has saved, has only been through my influence. My own mother is rather disgusted about it, and has discouraged me somewhat lately, but rather than do anything, I decided to tell my story to you. I have been on good terms with his family so far as that is concerned, and have visited at his home quite frequently until recently, when I decided that I would stop going over. It is rather hard for me to get acquainted with any new young men, otherwise, I would go out with others, but everyone who knows me knows that I have been going with this young man so long that they do not ask me to go out. Do you think it would be the proper thing for me to ask the young man when he intends to get married, and if not very soon, that I break with him? I have a good position, and would be willing to work after being married in order to get something saved, and have often thought of telling him this, but I don't seem to be able to get up enough nerve to start on the subject. Mother has said that it will always be that his family comes first even after he is married, and that I will have to put up with that if I do marry him. It just seems that he will spend his last cent on something that his mother or family wants, and they spend more of their money on parties than anything else. One party a month at their home is nothing.

"DISCONTENTED."

I don't wonder you are discontented. You have wasted seven years on a young man who is not sufficiently interested in marrying you to save his money or try to get a better position. You are too young to worry about not attracting other men, and if I were you, that is just what I should do. If you care to, tell him quite frankly that you intend to make other friendships because you feel that you are wasting your youth. It may make him think things over more seriously.

Patricia

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl 21 years old and Miss Gale my problem is this. I like a young man living in the same boarding house with me very much. I have seen this same man quite a bit with another girl although I do not think he is engaged to her. On the other hand I think this man likes me but he knows I am shy when he is around. What can I do to overcome this shyness? While I have never been out with this young man do you think it would be proper for me to invite him to a party or to play cards? Please, Miss Gale, tell me how to win this man's attention.

PATRICIA.

Try to forget yourself, my dear, and think of others and your shyness will overcome itself. Invite the young man to play cards.

Brown Eyes

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a reader of your column and find it interesting. I have many respectable boy friends and often go to the theater with them. When they take me home do you think it proper to ask them in? My parents do not approve of it.

BROWN EYES.

It depends on the hour, my dear. If it is late, as it naturally would be after the theater, don't ask the boy to come in with you.

Forgive Me

DEAR MISS GALE:

At last I have come for some of your wonderful advice. I am 19 and in love with a boy 21. I only had about seven dates with him to find out I loved him very dearly, and I thought in return he loved me. Who knows! I invited him to a holiday picnic to which he was very pleased to go, and every evening asked me about it, until the night preceding it when he called and told me he was not going with me. He being a rather slow fellow, not indulging in smoking or drinking, thought he would be a bore to me. I was very hurt, Miss Gale. Can you blame me? So I hung up on him. I have only seen him once since this happened and intended not to speak to him. But, oh! the lonely nights I spend. Others do not interest me at all. He seems to be rather stubborn and as I know it is his place to speak first, I will not unless you say so, be the first to speak. What do you think about it Miss Gale? I love him so much I can hardly wait until we are brought by fate, I hope, together again. I rely on your answer, Miss Gale, and will be awaiting it eagerly. I want him to say,

FORGIVE ME.

Perhaps he had a very good reason for being unable to go with you, and you should have been courteous enough to listen instead of hanging up the receiver. I don't blame him for being angry. Naturally, you were disappointed but since he obviously wanted to go, you should have given him the benefit of the doubt. Speak to him and I am sure he will be glad to be friends again.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

POLITICS AND WOMEN

QUEER, what politics does to women.

Not all women, of course, but most.

Get me right. I'm strong for careers for women, although I believe that the finest and most profitable career for the majority of women will always be motherhood. But I see no reason why motherhood shouldn't be combined with other professions, industries and arts. Indeed, the most successful mothers I know are those who have a grasp on the working world, and whose personalities have been mellowed and balanced by that contact.

But when it comes to politics—

Well, maybe it balances and mellows them, but I've still to be convinced.

Generally speakinng, politics seem to work like hasheesh on females.

From being comfortable, good-natured, easy going mammas, they develop into howling dervishes.

Blood in the eye and a chip on the shoulder, strident, assertive, domineering. Or they become too complaisant, too-duckdeary, too wheedling.

If they're given power they're apt to run amuck with it and lose all sense of humor and proportion. If they get in a jam they lose their heads—although the same women may be able to face the hardest domestic tests with calmness and courage.

And when it comes to co-operating with men, women have a particularly difficult time in politics. They don't like to make compromises—whole loaf, or none, that's a woman's way. If they overcome that weakness, they may swing to the other extreme and make so many compromises that they have no more resistance left than a jellyfish.

Why is this?

It isn't because they're not as intelligent as men, or as patient and plucky. They are. Women can usually show men cards and spades in those virtues. But they can't seem to assimilate the political game.

It's probably due to their lack of experience. They're not wise yet to all the unwritten laws, codes and compacts by which men have run their political game for so long. They don't know how to shut the other eye—or conceal an extra ace. Particularly they don't know how to consume their own smoke—and profit by the other fellow's.

Doubtless, in time they'll learn.

But I wonder if it will be worth while.

To End Severe Cough Quickly, Try This

For real results, this old home-made remedy beats them all. Easily prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous home-made remedy. The immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster; does the work without blister.

Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

Every Woman Should Know About This.

It is as much your duty to be attractive as to keep a well-ordered home.

Why shouldn't every girl and woman strive to be attractive? It is not merely vanity; the modest knowledge of pleasant appearance is a mental prop that enhances whatever charms of personality its owner may have.

Let us suggest here, a recently discovered Toilet Accessory known as Mibalm Liquid Vanishing Cream.

Never before has there been offered a toilet preparation which fills such a long-felt want; never have women been so anxious to try a new product and never have they been so well pleased, and acknowledged its superior value over the old style solid vanishing creams.

MIBALM LIQUID VANISHING CREAM is a snow-white lotion, makes an ideal powder base, it is soothing, healing and mildly astringent; you can buy it at all the leading Drug and Department Stores, you can always get it at May's.

COL. T. J. KEENAN DIES AT HOME IN GIRARD

Col. Thomas Johnston Keenan, newspaper founder, Democratic leader and once one of the largest property owners in the downtown district, died last night in his home at Girard, Pa. He erected the downtown office building which bears his name.

Col. Keenan was born in Pittsburgh in 1859, the son of Thomas Johnston and Sophia G. Latimer Keenan.

He was a graduate of the Western University of Pennsylvania, now the University of Pittsburgh. After leaving college he entered the cooperage department of the Standard Oil Company and then joined the staff of the Pittsburgh "Times" as a reporter.

He became editor of that paper and in 1884, with Charles W. Houston, John F. Ritenour and Congressman Thomas M. Bayne, he formed the Pittsburgh "Press." He was named editor and remained in that position until 1901, when the paper was sold.

Col. Keenan was very active in Democratic politics in the state and at one time was secretary of the Allegheny County Democratic Committee.

In 1891 he organized the International League of Press Clubs and was the founder and first president of the Publishers' Press Association, now the United Press. From 1919 until 1911 he was chairman of the committee which secured a new charter for the city of Pittsburgh from the State Legislature. He founded the American Wheelmen, a national league of bicycle riders in 1896 and was president of that organization for many years.

Col. Keenan was one of the founders of the Pittsburgh Newsboys' Home and through popular subscription erected a monument to Stephen C. Foster. He was given the title of colonel when appointed to the staff of Gov. Hastings, and was named a lieutenant colonel of the Nineteenth Regiment, formed in this city during the Spanish-American War. He was a member of the Episcopal Church. He leaves one brother, Charles G. Keenan, and two sisters, Mrs. Albert Petit and Miss Sophia C. Keenan.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

CRICKET—AND LOVE

BEFORE you do it, ask yourself "Is it cricket?"

A thoroughbred is a man who knows instinctively what IS and what ISN'T "cricket." That's all!

He may be a billionaire, a ball-player, a poet or a prize-fighter—but he is never a bounder. He may wear an opera hat or overalls, carry a swagger-stick or a spade—but he always carries his "code!" And his code is "Play the game!"

Even in this day and degeneration, when most morals and all manners are beginning to be classed with hoop-skirts, bustles and pompadours, there is such a thing as "cricket!"

HELEN ROWLAND

What IS cricket?

Cricket is fairplay! Cricket is good breeding. Cricket is something finer than mere honesty, more delicate than a sense of honor, and harder to explain than a French irregular verb.

Even in love as in war where "all is fair," there is always cricket—yea, even amongst vamps and petters and cake-eaters and sheiks! Just as there is honor amongst thieves.

"It isn't cricket," Cherie, to let one man pay for the tickets, the roses, the taxi and the supper, and then spend all your evening flirting with another man.

It isn't cricket, Big Boy, to take a woman out to dinner, and make her look foolish by casting admiring glances at all the other women present, or flirting with another girl behind her back.

It isn't cricket to accept gifts, expensive attentions and devotions from one man, and then to give your dances and your kisses to another man.

It isn't cricket to hold your husband up to ridicule or to belittle your wife before others, no matter how much you may hate or love him or her.

It isn't cricket to flatter one woman by speaking disparagingly of another woman; or to tickle one man's vanity by breaking a date with another man.

It isn't cricket to borrow money that you are not certain you can return. Or to sue for alimony after two weeks of wedded bliss.

Or to bully a waiter, because you know that he can't answer back. Or to kiss-and-tell. Or to hit-and-run!

You may be awfully modern and "hard-boiled" and hot for "individualism"—and all that sort of bunk. You may not believe in romantic love or old-fashioned ideals. But down in their heart of hearts, every man and every woman wants to be a THOROUGHBRED.

Cricket is never doing anything unfair or ungenerous. Cricket is a sense of noblesse oblige. Cricket is playing the game!

Hungry Club Speaker Flays Book War

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

"Races in America will never get along any better than they are getting along now, until we stop teaching propaganda in our schools and teach history."

With such ringing phrases delivered with a forceful personality Dr. Carter G. Woodson, editor of the Journal of Negro History, held his white audience spellbound yesterday at the luncheon of the Hungry Club at Fort Pitt Hotel.

Reminded of Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson and his fight against so-called pro-British propaganda in American schools, the crowd sat back and prepared for an interesting session. They were not disappointed. For here was a learned doctor, born of ex-slave parents in Virginia, who worked his way through common school branches by self-instruction, completed high school working as a miner and later became a Harvard man.

And no race has had to fight more propaganda than the colored race. Therefore, they expected Dr. Woodson to know what it was all about. It was after the talk in a private interview that he flayed "Big Bill" and all of men of his type as:

"Men who are dangerous. Men who do not want people to know the truth."

And Dr. Woodson went on to add:

"In my unbiased study and research of history during my youth I was amazed to find that on this side of the Atlantic during those days before the Revolution we were less oppressed than any other people of the globe. It was just that we made up our minds that we wanted to run our business without any interference from the King of England. We were not suffering, however. We started the propaganda and a war resulted."

Dr. Woodson is upheld in his views, and entertains much the same opinion of the Chicago text book burning situation as Prof. A. P. James, well known historian at Pitt University.

Prof. James blew up, so to speak, when asked his opinion of Mayor Thompson and his tactics. Heatedly he replied:

"Tommyrot! Utter tommyrot! And I dare say no trained historian in this country has any sympathy for 'Big Bill' and his 'America First' outburst."

He brought up Mayor Thompson's war record and asked:

"I wonder how many remember the trouble Thompson was in when he was Mayor of Chicago during the war? Chicago was the 'sixth largest German city' in the world. The Federal government threatened to take the city over during the war because of the German propaganda. Thompson swung his election on the German vote. He is after votes now, and trying to keep in with certain elements whose votes constitute his success. It is a plain case of political scheming, not patriotism."

Dr. Woodson was asked:

"Do you not think the Revolutionary War was necessary, even if, as you say we were not oppressed? Otherwise we would not be 'free and equal' as we are today?"

His reply was:

"That is a matter of argument. I do not care to answer."

Prof. James was reminded of the same thing and laughed:

"Canada is just as free as we are. That is but sentimental patriotism, the belief that we are better off than they. As a matter of fact they think their form of government is the best. And they, in reality, are free."

Which, of course, few Americans will admit. Because naturally we thrill with the idea of Old Glory and can't imagine living under any other rule but that of our dear Uncle Sam.

Why not let Mister Thompson and Chicago have the fuss all to themselves. Who started this anyway?

MISSIONARY TELLS OF 24 YEARS IN AFRICA

His experiences as a missionary in Africa for 24 years will be the subject of Rev. George W. Rhoad tonight at the meeting of the Missionary and Bible conference in Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street. At last night's session, Rev. Rowland V. Bingham, director of the Sudan Interior and the Abyssinian Frontier missions, challenged claims of atheists by citing many Bible prophecies which have come true. The conference ends Wednesday.

RED CROSS ASKS CLOTHES FOR VICTIMS OF FLOOD

From 10 until 5 tomorrow a committee of Red Cross workers will be at the Federal Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad to receive contributions of clothing for the refugees of the Mississippi valley flood.

National headquarters of the American Red Cross at Washington, D. C., has asked the Pittsburgh chapter to gather two carloads of clothes. Dresses, suits, underwear, coats, stockings and sweaters are needed, with no hats, shoes or furs.

To Avoid Engine Repair Bills

MANY times expensive engine repair bills are incurred and it is afterwards found that all that was needed was a new set of spark plugs. For spark plugs in time deteriorate and need to be replaced.

When you buy spark plugs, be sure to insist on AC—the spark plug on which Lindbergh, Chamberlin, Byrd and other great flyers staked their lives. You, too, can have the same spark plugs.

COAST TRIP PITT-W. & J. GAME PRIZE

by JAMES J. LONG

PITT'S football schedule to date may not have been the toughest in the country, as measured by the fact that the Panthers have piled up 228 points against only seven for their opponents in the six games already played, but it can hardly be disputed that the waters through which Jock Sutherland must steer his craft "from here on in" do not give promise of a tranquillity or smoothness conducive to velvety progress.

First W. & J., next Nebraska and then Penn State! Those are all the teams that remain on the schedule, and meeting that trio in a row is all that the Blue and Gold warriors have to do between now and the end of the season. Mere play-toy stuff and only a childish romp!

SERIOUSLY, however, it is a question if any team in the country will have to face a harder card in the final three games of the season than will Sutherland's charges. They're all tough babies, those teams that remain to be tackled, and if the Panthers have had things a trifle easy in some of their earlier games they surely are going to make up for it in the contests to come.

Nothing need be said about the strength of Washington and Jefferson. Local fans saw the Presidents beat Carnegie Tech and know enough about Bill Amos and company and about the advanced football that Andy Kerr has taught them to realize that next Saturday's game will be a battle every inch of the way with the outcome a toss-up.

If you want to get a line on how good the Red and Black wearers are this year, just bear in mind that they are rivals of Pitt not only for the Western Pennsylvania sectional championship, but also for the titular honors of the entire East. Pitt, W. & J. and Princeton are the only unbeaten teams in the lot.

AFTER Nebraska lost to Missouri, 6 to 7, somebody remarked that the Cornhuskers were not so powerful this year as usual, but it must not be forgotten that those same Missourians also beat Kansas Aggies and Washington and smothered Northwestern under 34 points.

And if any further doubt remains as to Nebraska's caliber you need not look any further back than last Saturday, when, after beating Iowa State and Grinnell, the Cornhuskers walloped Syracuse, 21 to 0. Any eleven that beats Syracuse by 21 points is doing a full afternoon's work.

AS to Penn State, it would be pretty hard to pick a much tougher opponent for any of them. There was the usual bellow from some quarters when Penn State lost to Bucknell that Bezdek would be ousted as soon as possible, but Hugo's answer to the premature estimates of his eleven's strength and possibilities was to come back and smash Pennsylvania, 20 to 0, beat Syracuse, 9 to 6, and then perform the amazing feat of slaughtering Lafayette by the amazing score of 40 to 0, the same team that had caused W. & J. to be hailed as powerful when it lost to the presidents by only a 14 to 0 score.

To battle one hour with each of those three teams from next Saturday to Thanksgiving Day is all the work that the Panthers have had of them, and anyone who has been following the doings of the trio very closely this season will readily agree that it is quite enough.

THE National Association, the organization of the country's minor baseball leagues of all classes, seems determined to make its coming annual meeting the largest in the history of the body. In addition to the delegates from all of the minor leagues, it is desired to have as many major league men present as possible, and the invitations sent to the latter this year are more than usually cordial and pressing.

Transportation companies apparently are co-operating with the minor league association heads with more than their customary vigor in

SCOTT TOWNSHIP SOCCER TEAM KEEPS TITLE

The Scott township boys successfully defended their title of soccer champions of the Allegheny county schools by easily defeating the Heidelberg school eleven at Bower Hill by 3 goals to 0 yesterday.

The losers put up a plucky battle, but Scott's two sterling backs, Maravich and Paolini, kept the ball in Heidelberg's territory entirely after the first 15 minutes of play.

Tri-State Elects Today

By JESS CARVER.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Tri-State Conference, Western Pennsylvania's collegiate athletic organization, will be held today in the Fort Pitt Hotel here, with the election of a new commissioner and the straightening out of the organization's affairs as the problems of the day.

The meeting will be attended by the president of all the schools holding membership in the league, in addition to the graduate managers and coaching representatives.

This is the best news of collegiate origin that has come to the surface since the year of the big thirst. The conference, for the past year at least, has been dragging, with interest lax and misunderstandings frequent and serious. There have been rumblings and mutterings of ill faith, distrust and all that sort of thing, and the meetings, regular and special, have been ill attended.

It is to be hoped that today things will be straightened out in such a manner that the conference will function in the future in the manner in which it was intended. The rules need clarifying, in some instances, and there are a few new ones that might be introduced.

Geneva, Duquesne, Bethany, Thiel, Waynesburg and Westminster are the present members of the league.

CO-EDS TAKE UP SPORT

No longer will the co-eds at Syracuse University permit strangers to accost them on the streets and get away with it. The latest addition to the extra curricular activities is the study of scientific boxing. Picture above shows Miss Ethel Booth (left) and Miss Wilda Chapman, busy "studying."

Tom Sayers "Dives" to Godfrey

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Tom Sayers of Detroit, who was scheduled to trade blows with George Godfrey, Negro heavyweight fighter, at the arena here last night, ceased activities 60 seconds after the beginning of the first round.

The doughty warrior from the West exchanged a few light taps with his opponent and then suddenly slid gracefully forward on his face. He lay there while the referee counted him out. Then he sprang lightly to his feet and stepped jauntily to his corner.

His action threw the crowd into an uproar. Spectators stood on their chairs, booing and hissing. Others threw their hats, cushions and programs into the ring. Police had their hands full quieting the crowd.

Immediately after Sayers was counted out, Chairman Weiner of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission jumped through the ropes and announced the Detroit battler's portion of the purse would be forfeited.

Jack Zivic To Box Saylor

JACK ZIVIC and Young Saylor will box the main bout of 10 rounds at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, taking the place of a bout previously announced between Walcott Langford, Chicago Negro middleweight, and Lou Scozza, of Buffalo. Scozza ran out of the match, according to Matchmaker Johnny Ray.

Saylor, who never has lost a fight, and Zivic were practically matched for the Motor Square Club last spring, but a match between Zivic and Cuddy DeMarco was substituted.

In his most recent start, Monday night of last week, Saylor defeated Teddy Esterbrook, of Niles, O., in the Motor Square ring, after having beaten Lynn Jordan, Johnstown Negro, in the same ring the preceding Monday night.

A strong preliminary card will back up the main event.

Cuddy DeMarco was not permitted to box Jimmy Deering in a bout in Chicago last night because of a New Jersey suspension that hangs over him following a bout in Newark with Billy Petrolle. Deering similarly was not allowed to box because he is suspended in Illinois.

The Jimmy King who defeated Homer Robertson in a 10-round bout at New

Walker and M'Tigue Ready for Bell

By HARRY MacNAMARA,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

MIKE M'TIGUE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Mickey Walker, world's middleweight boxing champion, and Mike McTigue, former world's lightweight titleholder, will be the principals in the 10-round windup of Promoter Jim Mullen's all-star card at the Coliseum tonight. There is a great deal at stake for both warriors in this combat and a riproaring Irish fight is anticipated.

Walker will be making his first start as a light-heavyweight, a victory for Mickey would put him right in line for a light-heavyweight championship match. Mickey plans to win that title before he retires and he will be in there winging away all the time.

McTigue lost the light heavyweight championship recently to Tommy Loughran by decision. Loughran built up a lead in the early rounds but at the finish McTigue was going great guns. Mike believes he can regain the title if given another chance at Loughran.

McTigue's chance for a return engagement with Loughran would be lost in the event he loses to Walker. Both battlers are reported to be in first class condition and confident of victory.

Walker is of the opinion that he will be able to wear down McTigue and eventually knock him out. McTigue, on the other hand, points to the fact that he was able to hold his own with Mickey in a previous bout, despite the fact that his punching hand—his right—was fractured.

Mike asserts that his right hand is good as ever again and adds that he hopes to stop Mickey somewhere along the route. McTigue, it is reported, will enter the ring a favorite.

Roleaux Saguero, the Negro light-heavyweight from Cuba, who has an enviable record of knockouts, will clash with Benny Ross of Buffalo in the 10-round semi-windup.

W.-J. to Honor Memory Of A. R. Hamilton

Alumni of Washington and Jefferson College, whose football team meets the University of Pittsburgh eleven in the Pitt Stadium next Saturday afternoon, will pay tribute to the memory of the late A. R. Hamilton when they present an inscribed tablet to the University of Pittsburgh before the start of Saturday's contest. The presentation will be made by Dr. Baker, president of Washington and Jefferson College, to Chancellor John G. Bowman of the University of Pittsburgh. The inscription on the tablet reads:

THE ATHLETIC COUNCIL OF
WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON COLLEGE
PRESENTS THIS TABLET TO THE UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH IN MEMORIAM OF ALFRED REED HAMILTON.
HE GAVE UNSPARINGLY OF TIME, THOUGHT
AND MEANS TO THE SUPPORT AND MAINTENANCE OF TRUE ATHLETIC PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE, AND FOR THIS REASON
HIS MEMORY WILL LIVE FOREVER
IN BOTH INSTITUTIONS.

Spider Kelly, Old Boxing Star, Succumbs

ROCHESTER, Minn., Nov. 1—(AP.)—Death today tolled off the final count for Spider Kelly, once an outstanding contender for the lightweight boxing championship.

Ending a fight of several years against disease, Spider died from a blood clot on the brain, after an operation for mastoid trouble. He was 55 years old.

Kelly, whose true name was James Patrick Curtin, came here 10 days ago from Tucson, Tex., where he had lived several years seeking to regain his health. His body will be sent to San Francisco for burial.

Fights that won Kelly fame included a 25-round bout with the then champion, Joe Gans, in New York, when the Spider gained a draw, although many critics gave him an edge. Gans then was at the height of his career.

A number of Kelly's fights were for 40 rounds and he often had a grueling bout every month.

After he quit boxing, Kelly won renown as a clever second of boxers.

UNBEATEN TEAMS TO MEET

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 1.—Two undefeated football teams will meet at Corcoran Field here Saturday when St. Xavier is host to the United States Marines. Each team has a perfect record and both possess an unusually strong offensive drive.

Pasadena Bid May Go With Victory

By CARL W. SHATTO

THE Golden Panthers of Pitt against the Golden Bears of California out in the golden West—that's likely to be gridiron attraction featuring the annual Tournament of Roses, at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's Day.

Last year, when Pitt's season was one of fair, but not exceptional success, the Panthers were considered as a Tournament of Roses contestant, and were even "felt out" as to the possibility of their accepting should they be extended the coveted invitation from the far West. This season, by crushing all opposition and overwhelming all rivals, the wearers of the Blue and Gold have advanced to the head of the list of Tournament of Roses game eligibles.

Today the Panthers stand out as one of the few undefeated teams; yes, stand out among the undefeated, even, for in the matter of scoring they are second among all the col-

CHESTER SMITH, former Pittsburgh newspaperman, who is now telling the boys about it in Cleveland, dropped in to make his biennial report on the state of the football racket in the wide open spaces of the Middle West.

HAVEY BOYLE.

Having had an eye for football ever since his salad days at dear old Dartmouth, Mr. Smith has never been one to overlook anything of interest pertaining to the sport of great stadia, indignation meetings over hapless coaches, cheer leaders, and what-not.

Having had, also, an opportunity to see our Western Pennsylvania game as flashed in the Western Conference, Mr. Smith has notes of importance to pass out to the trade.

BY AND large, Mr. Smith vouchsafes, the game here is just about the same as in the better press-agented Big Ten. The boys, fresh from the farm in the low country, seem to be a littler heftier than the coal and iron boys of our section, but if the two brands were to butt heads in an exchange of strength, Mr. Smith reports, the affair likely would end up in a draw.

Mr. Smith amplifies his report by saying that there might be a little more of the gambling spirit among the mentors of the Western Conference, meaning that "safety first" is not quite the idol that it sometimes appears to be in the minds of our boys in this section.

Leading these coaches who have an urge for the football lottery is Mr. Robert Zuppke of Illinois, who will take any kind of a chance to win and risk losing at the same time. Mr. Zuppke, it is added, is not one to go in for no-decision affairs.

IT WAS Mr. Carl Snavely and his boys at Bucknell who threw an

SPEAKING of SPORTS

THE suggestion is made that eight-round bouts such as made up the most recent card at Motor Square Garden, are ideally suited for both the boxers and spectators, inasmuch as the participants are able to throw more action into the shorter distance and the fans do not become filled up with any one bout. This might be all right for the preliminaries, where even six rounds is sufficient, but windups should be more or less uniform everywhere, and 10 rounds is the favorite distance. The boxers and spectators become accustomed to them and the best results are attained over the standardized route.

For instance, Phil Goldstein and Tommy Crowley fought the main bout of the show at Motor Square Garden referred to and were on even terms at the finish. Two more rounds would have definitely settled the issue either way. The same was true of their first meeting, an eight-rounder, in the same ring, last Christmas afternoon. That also was almost a dead heat. Goldstein got off to a big lead, which Crowley gradually whittled down. Tommy won the decision with a hurricane finish in the last round, but many of the fans thought Goldstein's early lead entitled him to at least a draw. The usual two more rounds also would have settled that bout beyond dispute.

Main bout boxers fight 10 rounds elsewhere and know how to gauge themselves accordingly; chopping off the last two rounds undoubtedly cramps their style, and even or near-even finishes are not to the liking of the cash customers, who prefer a winner and a loser.

REGARDLESS of how Pitt and Penn State fare in their annual meeting in the stadium on Thanksgiving Day, the Panthers will retain the edge in the matter of victories in their long series of gridiron meetings. Pitt teams have won 15 of the battles, State 12 and two have resulted in ties.

TOM GOODWIN, Boston promoter, is not satisfied the featherweight championship situation has been cleared up, despite the fact that Benny Bass is generally accepted as the new titleholder and Johnny Dundee and Tony Canzoneri clashed in New York last week in another "elimination," and he is going ahead with plans for the staging of a tournament of his own. He has matched Sammy Fuller and Chick Suggs of Boston for a bout for the New England title next Monday night and hopes to stage a battle between Canzoneri and Red Chapman the following Monday and then pair off the winners for a later date. Pete Zivic, local bantamweight, will meet Andy Martin of Boston in the semi-final to the Fuller-Suggs match.

AN impression has been lying around loose for some time that Notre Dame resents the "Fighting Irish" name applied to its football

FYOCK AND PARKINSON MAY START FOR PITT

TOMMY ARMOUR LEADS JOHNNY FARRELL

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Tommy Armour, national open champion, took a one-hole lead on Johnny Farrell, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., here today by shooting a sensational 33 in the first nine of their 36-hole first round match in the Professional Golfers' Association tournament.

The two stars drew a steady stream of applause from the gallery as they got away sensational shots. Farrell lost the first, third and fifth holes, but retrieved one at the seventh, where Armour was forced to slice his approach around a bunch of trees.

The eighth was halved, and, at the ninth, Farrell was deep in a gully of cedars 100 yards from the green. His approach was 10 feet from the pin, while Armour was trapped and lost the hole to be 1 up.

CLUBS CANNOT DEDUCT BONUSES FROM TAXES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—(INS.)—Bonuses paid ball players for signing contracts, and purchases of players, do not constitute capital expenditures within the meaning of internal revenue laws and hence cannot be deducted in computing income taxes, the United States Board of Tax Appeals ruled today.

The decision was rendered in an appealed case by the Dallas club, which sought to deduct $18,240 of this class of expenditure. The decision has been eagerly awaited by professional baseball clubs.

EDWARDS, FISHER, BOOTH OUT

DWIGHT FYOCK at quarter, Capt. Gibby Welch and Whitey Hagan at the halves and Pug Parkinson at fullback—that probably will be the backfield combination that will start the game for Pitt Saturday when the Panthers renew gridiron warfare with the Presidents of W. & J. at the Pitt Stadium. Should Coach Sutherland decide to start this makeshift backfield, it will not be because he wishes to emulate Knute Rockne and save his regulars, and it will not be because the regulars have failed to deliver; rather, it will be because

SHOTS and PASSES

—by Julius Levin

COMPOSED of youngsters who are well versed in the fine points of the game, the Penn Five of Sharpsburg is expected to make a determined bid for the championship in the Central League this winter.

The Penn Five last year won the championship of the Metropolitan League and later was crowned light first-class titleholder of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U.

In view of the fact that all veterans of last year's quintet have signified their intention to return this winter, the Penn passers are expected to make rapid strides in basketball this year.

In Arture, Tress and Carbone, the Penn Five boasts three stellar passers, who rank with the best in their class. Arture has shown wonderful improvement as a basketball star in recent years and much should be heard from him this winter. This youngster stands an excellent chance of ranking as one of the most valuable players in the Central League this season.

THREE strong amateur teams will represent the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House on the basketball floor this winter. Athletic Director Joseph (Ziggy) Kahn has organized a midget, boys and first-class teams to represent the Center avenue institution in amateur basketball this winter.

All of the clubs have been considerably strengthened, according to Coach Kahn, and indications point to a successful season on the floor.

The senior team at the I. K. S. this winter will be stronger than ever, judging by the caliber of players signed. This quintet, which will meet the leading first-class amateur teams in Western Pennsylvania this winter, will be composed of former high school stars.

GIBBY WELCH, Pitt's candidate for All-America honors this fall, may play for the Webster Hall basketball team in the West Penn League after the close of the football campaign. The addition of Welch to the Webster Hall roster should make that team one of the best drawing cards in the league.

Prominent collegiate stars will wear the colors of the Webster Hall team this season. There is a squad of about 25 men out for the team, but this list will be cut down to 10, the limit allowed by the officials of the West Penn League.

Those out for the team are [illegible]mes, Waynesburg; Booth, Washington; Gashen, Pitt; Loftus, Duquesne; Miller, Grove City; Hukie, University of Kentucky; Clark, Princeton; Schrading, Duquesne; Curran, Pitt; Kingsley, Notre Dame, and Williams, Center College. Williams is coaching the team.

onion at an otherwise fragrant Penn State football team this season. Capt. Roepke and his men at State had hardly settled down to serious business when Bucknell, with a good team, and well coached, shocked the dormitories of State by achieving a 13 to 7 decision over the Blue and White. But for that slip-up on the part of State, Pittsburghers besides awaiting the contest between the undefeated Pitt and Wash-Jeff teams would also have a wide open eye staring intently at a possible championship encounter here between State and Pitt on Thanksgiving Day.

THIS Snavely achievement over a worthy State team has an especial interest to this local boy. Long before Bucknell dreamed of the conquest of State, Mr. Joseph Rigby, a demon tackler of Bellefonte, since graduated into the prosaic newspaper business, made us privy to the greatness of Mr. Snavely as a coach.

Having observed the exceptional fitness and completeness of Mr. Snavely it was Mr. Rigby's wont to rush around town kicking people in the shins, thumping their thighs and straight-arming others to impress upon them the importance of Mr. Snavely.

Your correspondent on a summer evening in a place not many miles hence, as the crow flies, went through one of the Rigberian expositions of the soundness of Snavely's teaching style, especially in the matter of tackling.

Mr. Rigby demonstrated with great vigor just how all pupils of the great Snavely got their man and the system employed on your correspondent to point the lesson was not altogether unlike that system employed by the Northwest Mounted who, legend runs, always get their man.

Bedford, Mass., last night is a New Orleans middleweight.

Promoter Jim McGirr will complete his card today for his show in the Palisades roller rink, McKeesport, Thursday night. Harry Dudley, Negro welterweight of Oakland, Cal., meets Alex Simms, of Canton, in the 10-round main bout, and Jack Murray, Philadelphia Negro welter, mixes with Tug Phillips in the eight-round semi-final. Both Dudley and Murray are now making their home in the Hill district.

Nick Sussell, Rochester, Pa., welterweight, meets Jackie Herman, of Wheeling, for the third time in the six-round main bout at Wheeling next Monday night. Tommy Sullivan, middleweight stablemate of Sussell, will meet a good opponent in the semi-final, and Bobby Fleming, local flyweight, will engage Johnny Puff, of Wheeling, in another six-rounder.

Monte Sirko, of Oakland, has just signed a contract to box under the management of Reed Brown. He will do his future fighting as a bantamweight instead of as a feather.

Joey LaGrey, of Johnstown, will meet Sylvan Bass, of Baltimore, in the 10-round main bout at the Maryland Theater, Cumberland, November 14.

Young Nanel, of Swissvale, meets Cleveland Phil Goldstein in one of the six-round preliminaries to the Billy Wallace-Tommy (Kid) Herman bout at Cleveland tonight. Babe Herman and Jimmy Trammell meet in the semi-final.

My Sullivan, St. Paul youngster, is now a stablemate of Gene Tunney, under the management of Billy Gibson.

Pete Latzo and Maxie Rosenbloom meet in the main bout in the Olympia arena, Detroit, Tuesday night of next week. Pete Zivic, local bantamweight, and Billy Shaw, of Detroit, will appear in one of the 10-round preliminaries, with Joe Simonich and Jack McVey boxing the semi-final.

Plans Bout For Summer

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Although Jack Dempsey has denied signing a contract with Tex Rickard for another fight with Gene Tunney early next summer, reports continued here today that Rickard had endeavored to get the former champion's agreement for such a contest, chiefly to prevent attempts at staging a heavyweight championship by other promoters.

Rickard said he had Tunney signed to an agreement for his exclusive services up until October 16, 1928, and added that the champion would not fight for anyone else.

"The only stipulation in my contract with Tunney," Rickard declared, "is that the fight be held during the summer season. This agreement contains a financial arrangement similar to that signed by Tunney for me last January in St. Louis.

"Dempsey, I know, will be ready for me when I want him. It may be that he will engage in one fight indoors. I can offer him $150,000 for an indoors bout."

Dempsey indicated that any fighting he might do would be under Rickard's direction, although he said he had not decided whether he would reenter the ring. His plans depend somewhat on his suit with Jack Kearns, opening November 15 at Trenton, N. J.

Rickard produced a statement revealing that from September 1, 1925, to August 31 of this year the profits of Madison Square Garden were $1,393,194.28 from boxing exclusively. Profit on indoor shows amounted to $632,902.31 and the net from outdoor shows was $760,291.97. Boxing's indoor gross receipts were $2,797,708 and the gross for outdoor shows $3,550,808.41, making a total gross of $6,348,016.81. These figures, Rickard said, are exclusive of the Dempsey-Tunney fight at Chicago.

an endeavor to induce as many big leaguers as possible to attend, and countless excursion pamphlets, etc., have been received at Pirate headquarters pointing out the quickest, safest and cheapest routes to the prospective scene of the confab in Texas.

AS far as the local club is concerned, however, the gaudy posters, circulars, etc., are being wasted, as none of the Pirate officials will attend the meeting.

Both President Barney Dreyfuss and Secretary Watters are up their ears in work, clearing up the accounts of the 1927 season and the hang-over details of the world series, and Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss is en route to Europe with his bride on their honeymoon.

The Pittsburgh club will be represented at the convention, however, as Scout Bob Tarleton will make a trip to the scene from his home in Galveston.

There is little or no chance of anything important bobbing up in the nature of deals with the minors—the selling season reopens November 5—as practically all of the worth-while players in the little leagues have already been bought or drafted—but it is considered advisable to have a man in touch with the situation in the event that something might develop, so Tarleton will be on the ground to look after Buccaneer affairs.

teams, but it has been knocked in the head by a statement made by Father Matthew Walsh, president of Notre Dame University, in Chicago the other day. According to Edward J. Geiger, sports editor of the Chicago American, Father Walsh declared the name "Fighting Irish" is sacred with the boys and keeps alive the fighting spirit for every member. The football squad is made up of Polish, Portuguese, German, Bohemian, French and Irish athletes, the latter in the majority. Father Walsh said:

"I am pleased to let you know that the university authorities are in no way averse to the name 'Fighting Irish,' as applied to our athletic teams. It is a name that came to us spontaneously from outside without any suggestion from us, and seems to combine the kind of spirit we like to see carried into effect by the various organizations that represent us on the athletic field. I sincerely hope that we may always be worthy of the ideals embodied in the term 'Fighting Irish.'"

COAST

leges of the East, and in the matter of denying opponents scores, they rank first among all the major elevens of the football world.

MANY ELIMINATED

For the last two seasons the Crimson Tide of Alabama has received and answered the Pasadena call. This, however, is another year—a year in which Alabama's Tide has been dyed crimson by the blood of her own defeats. Georgia Tech, which loomed as Alabama's successor, was eliminated from the list of eligibles last Saturday by Notre Dame, leaving the South without a Pasadena candidate. The teams of the mid-West can be eliminated in one fell swoop. The Big Ten grid machines are automatically eliminated by the conference's ironclad ban on post-season games, and Notre Dame is to quit the field after battling the Trojans of Southern California at Soldier Field, Chicago.

In the East, Princeton's undefeated eleven can be regarded as a possibility, but only as a remote possibility, for no member of the former "Big Three" ever regarded post-season conflicts with favor, and there is no reason to believe that Tiger officials will alter their stand.

Who, then, has a chance of depriving the Panthers of a trip to the coast? The answer must be told in a whisper 'lest Pitt's rivals hear and heed it, for they are none other than the Presidents of W. and J.

W. AND J. PITT'S RIVAL

Undefeated, even as Pitt, the Presidents are just as eligible as are the Panthers, and, in addition they have two powerful magnets that may draw the invitation their way. The first magnet is Andy Kerr, who gained renown on the Pacific Coast while serving as assistant to Pop Warner at Stanford before becoming head coach at W. and J.; the second is the showing that W. and J. made in holding a powerful California eleven to a tie in this same tournament a few years ago.

Whether the Panthers or the Presidents get the call probably will be decided at the Pitt Stadium Saturday when these ancient and mighty rivals renew their annual gridiron feud. To the winner of this battle will go the championship of the "Big Four," probably the Eastern title and possibly a few strands of the national banner. It would appear rather merciless to add to the burden that these teams must carry into the conflict, but out of justice to the occasion it must be admitted that the players owning the long end of the score Saturday night probably will own tickets to California and return a few weeks later.

There is no certainty that California will get the call as the West Coast representative. Pop Warner's Cardinals of Stanford are as much in the running as are the Bears, each having tasted defeat only once. Were the matter of nominating the coast representative left to Western Pennsylvania gridiron fans Stanford would get the call, for there are indeed few who have forgotten Warner's achievements at Pitt.

Regardless of whether Pitt or W. & J. should be chosen to oppose Stanford, the game would not want for color and appeal. A Panther-Cardinal duel would pit the pupil, Sutherland, against his former teacher, Warner; a President-Cardinal duel would pit the one-time assistant, Kerr, against "Old Pop," the man whom he formerly aided. Sutherland was a star lineman at Pitt when Warner was coach here. W. & J.'s Andy was freshman coach at Pitt when Warner was head coach of the Panthers and, later, he served as Pop's assistant at Stanford, preparing the Cardinals for Warner's coming.

BELGIAN HEAVY SIGNED

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Cyclone Jack Humbeck, Belgian heavyweight champion, today was definitely signed to take a hand in the American heavyweight elimination program. Cable negotiations have been completed calling for a 10-round match between Humbeck and Arthur De Kuh, Italian, on November 21. Humbeck will arrive in this country November 12. Matchmaker Andy Neiderreiter closed the match with Humbeck's manager, Tommy Burns.

his regulars are incapacitated by injuries. The chances are that this quartet scheduled to start the game Saturday also will finish the battle.

The regulars, loss of whom will cut down the Panther power, are Fullback Booth and Quarterbacks Edwards and Fisher. While his mates went through a hard preparatory drill last evening, Booth was in bed and under a doctor's care. He is suffering from a severe stomach ailment and an attack of grip. Edwards and Fisher reported at the practice field, but leg injuries forced them to watch the workout from the sidelines.

CHANCE FOR BOOTH TO PLAY

There is a possibility, according to Dr. Kendrick, Pitt team physician, that Booth may see some service in the W. & J. game. Even should he get into the lineup, however, he will be so weakened by injuries and sickness that he will be unable to match the high standard of play he set in Pitt's early games.

The chances of Edwards getting into the lineup are hardly one in 100. A leg injury sustained in the Carnegie Tech game has kept him on the sidelines ever since. He walks with a distinct limp and cannot run without suffering great pain.

Fisher, who suffered a leg injury about two weeks ago, started at quarter in the practice session last evening, but gave way to Fyock when he suffered another hurt. Whether or not he will play Saturday depends on how quickly his leg responds to treatment.

NEW GROUP WORKS WELL

The Fyock-Welch-Hagan-Parkinson combination functioned in fair fashion last evening and it is likely that Coach Sutherland will put it to another test late today. It is rumored Parkinson will get the call at quarterback if Booth is able to assume the fullback role.

The scrubs, equipped with W. & J. plays, opposed the varsity in a long and hard scrimmage session last evening. The same program is to be in effect today.

The opening day ticket sale indicates that a capacity crowd of 65,000 will witness the Panther-President clash. Sale in the Pittsburgh district was so brisk that most of the seats between the 20-yard lines were sold before nightfall. W. & J. sent in a call for an additional supply shortly afternoon yesterday, indicating that the President delegation will be the biggest ever to attend a game here.

CHILLY SAUCE

ONE of baseball's noblemen is now a manager, and the fans' reaction to his achievements should be watched with interest. A few weeks ago a man with a splendid physique, but of retiring mien, arose from his seat and tried to make his way out of the Yankee Stadium after the Yanks had plastered our dear Pirates. The athletic-looking fellow seemed anxious to get through the exits without causing any commotion, but as his big form arose, somebody shouted, "Walter Johnson," and our hero was immediately mobbed by hundreds of men, women and children, who wanted the great pitcher's autograph. Emulating Babe Ruth in patience, Walter signed programs and other articles for something like 30 minutes.

LET us hope it won't be so, but some day next summer, Walter Johnson may not have to fight his way out of the ball park after his club has lost six or seven games in a row. Broadly speaking, the fans of the country will be solid for the big farmer boy who has done much for baseball as he moved in the big league for more than 20 years with the refinement of a gentleman. There is no doubt as to where Johnston stands in the affections of the American public, but let his team do a nose-dive into the second division and stay there for a long time, and then study the emotions of Newark fans. If the Newark folks love Walter in October as they do in May they will be setting some new conventions in the grand old game. The typical fan will squawk plenty under these conditions whether the pilot being a McGraw or Johnson, or some poor fellow who is just trying to get along in the world. If Walter can change this, he, indeed, will be an outstanding character in the sport.

MEANTIME, what about Alexander? Aleck came very close to pitching the Cardinals to another pennant and nothing has been said regarding the retirement for the great veteran. A comparison of Johnson and Alexander may be a bit biased, coming from one who like the National League, yet there seems to be such a wide gap between the styles of these two masters that a few words may not be out of place.

JOHNSON and Alexander won something like 90 games each in three consecutive years—or 30 victories a season—which is the last word in proof of their effectiveness. That the two great sharpshooters used methods that have little in common also is a matter of fact. Johnson's terrific speed was his best asset, while Aleck the Great, especially in the past 10 years, has employed a wide assortment of twisters.

JOHNSON had so much stuff on his swifter when he was in his heydey that he needed nothing more to win a ball game. Alexander relied on outguessing to a large extent, and blessed with control that has never been surpassed, the National League star was able to do what he started out to do with the sphere.

NEITHER pitcher has been hard on the umpires. The officials could work behind Walter and Grover while sitting in a rocking chair. Johnson did make one little objectionable gesture to Umpire Barry McCormick just before Hazen Cuyler crashed out his double with the bases loaded in the eighth inning of the last game of the 1925 World Series. The veteran was slipping in the muddy box as he tried to retire Cuyler, two being out and the score tied. Fatigue was upon Walter, when with the count two balls and two strikes, he threw a fast ball over at a spot very close to the outside corner.

IT was one of those pitches, perhaps, that could have been called either way. In all events, Johnson, after the umpire had declared a ball, made a slight objection, yet he was very temperate in his manner of protesting. A minute later Cuyler walloped a liner down the rightfield line.

ALEXANDER had Babe Ruth at the plate in the last game of the 1926 series. A homer would have tied the score and Babe surely was in his home-run stride, although he was not making any of his four-sackers against the cagey vet of the mound. Two were out in the ninth and none was on as Aleck succeeded in getting Ruth two strikes and no balls. A pitch on the inside might have produced a homer into the rightfield seats, so Alexander strove to make Bambino hit an outside pitch. The first offering was not more than three inches outside, but Babe would not bite. The next pitch seemed to be an inch closer to the plate, and still, Babe refused to nibble. Alexander threw the next one so close to the corner that he protested mildly as Ruth was awarded a base on balls. It was a great exhibition of control, pitching with a big purpose in view.

MAN O'WAR'S INDOOR TRACK DESTROYED BY FIRE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—A large frame structure where Man o' War, Samuel D. Riddle's famous race horse, was trained during winter, was destroyed on the Riddle estate at Glen Riddle, Pa., early today. One hundred and fifty tons of hay in the shed were burned. The loss was estimated at $25,000 to $30,000, as the structure also contained valuable machinery.

The building was formerly used for Mr. Riddle's "farmers' breakfasts." The owner and his friends who followed the hounds, there entertained the farmers who permitted use of their fields for the hunt.

The structure was also used for putting the Riddle horses through their paces when conditions outdoors were unfavorable. The shed was 100 feet square.

Ty Leaves To Quit Macks

DETROIT, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—Ty Cobb was to leave for Philadelphia this afternoon to tender his formal resignation to Connie Mack, boss of the Athletics. After 23 years of service in the American League, Cobb has decided to hang up his spiked shoes for good.

Cobb's informal announcemnt of his retirement was made here yesterday. Official announcement, however, must come from the office of Connie Mack.

CONNIE AND TY TO CONFER

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—(INS.)—The question of whether Ty Cobb will be with the Athletics again next year or whether he will retire from major league baseball will be settled at a conference with Connie Mack here in the next few days, according to current reports.

Mack maintains he has not heard from Cobb since he left for a hunting trip in the West, but said he was due about the first of November and then the matter of a contract would be taken up.

Fear Ace May Go Stale

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Any fears that had existed in the minds of those who intend to see Joe Dundee, world's welterweight champion, defend his crown against the title assaults of Ace Hudkins, Nebraska challenger, that the match might be called off were stilled today.

Hard workouts indulged in by both fighters and indignant denials of a possible postponement by Promoter Dick Donald have caused the fans to forget persistent rumors that the match had been called off because of Donald's inability to pay Dundee his guarantee. Spring street wiseacres turned their attention today to a new subject—Hudkins' condition.

The rather well-known fact that Hudkins was at the peak of condition when the fight was postponed from last Saturday until Thursday, plus the hard workouts the Ace has been going through, have prompted considerable discussion as to whether he was getting stale. Several gymnasium experts and trainers have suggested that Hudkins was worked too closely. However, if he was he didn't show it in yesterday's workout.

Dundee also went through a sweat-raising performance, but not as strenuous one as Hudkins.

LANDIS FAVORS BARNARD

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Due consideration has been given to the sentiments of Commissioner K. M. Landis in choosing the new president of the American League, it was understood today. The boss of baseball is understood to be well pleased with E. S. Barnard, now head of the Cleveland club and the reported choice of the American League directors, who meet here tomorrow to pick Ban Johnson's successor.

CLEGHORN TO DRILL TENTATIVE LINEUP

Manager Odie Cleghorn will put his 1927-28 edition of the Pirates on the ice today in the first real workout of the preliminary program in preparation for the inaugural of the season at Duquesne Garden Tuesday night, November 15, against Detroit's rejuvenated Cougars.

The squad is on hand and anxious to don their skates after 10 days of gym and road work. Ty Arbour is the only missing player, but he is expected to arrive in time for the initial practice. Incidentally Arbour has not as yet signed his contract for the coming campaign, but Cleghorn does not expect any difficulty in getting the little fellow to affix his signature to the dotted line after his arrival.

Today's session will be confined mostly to skating exercises and shooting the puck up and down the ice, but after the first workout each succeeding session will be more grueling.

TEX RICKARD DENIES HE WILL BE OUSTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Tex Rickard, back at his desk yesterday after vacation at Hot Springs, Va., characterized as laughable reports that he would be ousted from the presidency of the Madison Square Garden Corporation because of reputed differences with the directors of boxing promotion policies.

"There is no chance of a release from my long-term contract, even if I wanted it," said Rickard. He was slated nevertheless for a conference later in the day with the Garden directorate. Difficulties, some of them connected with agreements made with the Spanish boxer, Paulino, were understood to exist within the Garden organization.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Another spurt of new issues at the beginning of the month caused prices of listed bonds to ease off again in today's market. The day's offerings amounted to nearly $45,000,000. Continued easy money, however, combined with disbursement to investors aggregating around $185,000,000 scheduled for October, tended to limit declines in most instances to small fractions.

There was some renewed buying of high grade railway liens, notably Missouri Pacific 5s, which sold at 100¾. Other leading issues, such as Chesapeake Corporation 5s, Erie 5s and Southern Pacific 4½s were in supply.

North American Edison 5s made up yesterday's fractional loss, but other utilities were dull. Steel issues were heavy, United States Steel 5s dropping fractionally while Dominion Certificate 5s fell back a point.

Irregularity continued to rule the foreign department. French obligations displayed a firm tendency, but Italian bonds were easy.

Considerable demand developed for Liberty 3½s, but other government securities were quiet.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

DENY FURTHER STEEL DEALS BY DU PONT

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Denial that E. I. Dupont de Nemours and Company had become active again as a purchaser or seller of common stock of the United States Steel Corporation was made today by Irenee Dupont, vice chairman of the board. He declared the company neither had bought nor sold any steel stock beyond its original investment several months ago.

As this stock had been acquired originally for investment, there was no reason for selling it, he asserted, and the company was not inclined to increase its original investment of 114,000 shares, which it bought at an average price of $122.50 a share, in view of the objections raised by the Federal Trade Commission at that time.

Mr. Dupont also denied reports the company had been buying stock of the United States Rubber Company. It was possible, he said, that individuals named Dupont, of which they were many in Wilmington, might have been purchasers, but this had no relation to the Dupont company.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—With temperatures in the Canadian Northwest today the lowest of the season, wheat values scored a quick upturn after a setback at the start. Initial declines were in sympathy with weakness of the market at Liverpool. Opening at a shade to ⅜c off, Chicago wheat soon advanced to above yesterday's finish. Corn and oats also developed strength, corn starting unchanged to ⅛c lower, but then rising all around. Provisions were inclined to sag.

Suggestions of the approach of winter conditions likely to interfere with the movement and quality of Canadian wheat were more than a counter-balance at times today for Liverpool reports that estimates of the Canadian yield were being enlarged, and that notice was being taken of reports of improved grading of receipts in Canada. Wheat bulls derived some encouragement also from advices that the present indicated exportable surplus for Australia is only 65,000,000 bushels, an amount much smaller than recent predictions.

Estimates on the corn crop by Chicago private statisticians today proved to be about as expected and were without any immediate influence on the market. The estimates averaged 2,685,000,000 bushels as the total production looked for, with farm reserve figures averaging 114,000,000 bushels.

NATIONAL CHAMP KAYOED

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—(UP.)—Milo Mallory, Olympic Club, National amateur heavyweight champion, was knocked out in the second round by Tom Elliott, Hollywood Athletic Club, in the Far-Western amateur championships here last night. Elliott floored the champion five times.

Does the oil you use resist or does it help your motor to start?

no other oil ever produced is as easy starting as this remarkable new medium-bodied winter motor oil

A BITTER winter morning—icy winds blowing—and your motor chilled "to the bone." . . . How willingly does it start? Are the pistons glued to the cylinders? The bearings enwrapped with oil thickened by cold? Does your starter labor?

. . . Or, to get easy starting, have you substituted a light oil that is too thin to assure efficient lubrication?

Neither of these worries of cold-weather driving need bother you now. Atlantic Winter Medium—an extraordinary new Atlantic product—conquers both. In it you have a medium-bodied oil having all the easy starting qualities of light, thin oil. Yet thorough lubrication is certain.

Paraffine base gives Atlantic Winter Medium a "body" which can't be broken down by the most violent attacks of friction and motor heat; while removal of the waxy substances which ordinarily cause paraffine base oil to thicken, makes this oil Jack Frost's complete master.

Put Atlantic Winter Medium in your motor now.

Atlantic 600 Transmission Oil
—a companion for Atlantic Winter Medium
A lubricant for transmissions and differentials that is quite as remarkable as Atlantic Winter Medium is for motors. The extraordinary fluidity at zero of Atlantic 600 Transmission Oil, combined with its stability of "body," makes it an ideal lubricant at any weather temperature. Gears shift easily on coldest days.

Steel Men's Pessimism Not Shared by Other Leaders

By B. C. FORBES

IN THE SOUTH, Nov. 1.

AMERICA'S steel magnates, one sees by the papers, are talking so pessimistically that stock prices have been hurt. Admittedly, the steel industry is not as prosperous as it was a year ago. But if comparisons are made with earlier years, it will be seen that the industry is far from being in Andrew Carnegie's "pauper" stage.

One trouble is that almost every American business man, every American business concern, every American industry expects to "break records" every month and every year. Therefore, a spell of normal activity, or anything savoring of a temporary lull, starts pessimistic howls.

IT IS entirely logical that Wall Street should shiver following the steel men's complaints, for Wall Street has been gaily forcing stocks higher and higher without bothering about sobering developments, of which, as repeatedly pointed out in this column, there have been a moderate number.

But should Wall Street start pulling down some of its speculative houses of cards, that would be no adequate reason for hastily concluding that industry and business and employment were headed for the bow-wows.

Perhaps it may serve a useful purpose to offset the steel men's complaints by giving the high points of interviews with responsible leaders in various parts of the country.

WHITEFORD R. COLE, president of the Louisville and Nashville, during a ride along his road said to me:

"Ever since the war we have become so accustomed to breaking records that we are inclined to become alarmed whenever there is a little pause for stocktaking, for preparing for the future. Railway traffic for 1927 will compare favorably with last year's. Lately there has been a slight decrease, both in traffic and in earnings, but the South's railroads are in good condition. There has been extraordinary movement of coal by the L. & N., C. & O. and N. & W. on account of the coal strike. North of the river our miscellaneous freight is a little ahead of last year.

"Cotton is moving earlier this year. The planter is very wisely liquidating his indebtedness promptly. On the whole, the southern farmer is in better shape this year than for some time past."

ROBERT E. Maddox, prominent Atlanta banker:

"Georgia is in better condition now than at any time in the last five years."

C. J. WOHLENBERG, Holstein, Iowa:

"Our section is definitely out of the woods. We go in heavily for fattening cattle, and prices are now the highest in years."

FRED I. KENT, Bankers' Trust Company, New York, and a recognized authority on international finance:

"Some of the ablest economic students in Europe think that 1928 may prove the most prosperous year in the history of the United States. The financial assistance we have extended should enable foreign countries to purchase American products more freely, and satisfactory foreign demand is extremely important for our national prosperity."

JOHN BOLINGER, National Shawmut Bank, Boston:

"Our textile industries are doing better, and if they don't make money this year, they never will."

A. P. GIANINNI, head of the largest bank in California:

"California is having an exceptionally good year. Conditions are sound and prospects are very satisfactory."

JOHN R. DOWNING, Louisville:

"For the first time since 1920 agriculture is catching step with industry. If this pace can be maintained, I see no reason why business cannot continue to go forward."

M. E. HOLDERNESS, St. Louis:

"There is no definite indication for either a sharp decline or a sustained advance in general business during the next few months."

THAT last statement accurately pictures the present frame of mind of the majority of this country's bankers.

MONEY RATE CUT STIMULATES MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Constructive forces were at work again in today's stock market which forged steadily upward under the leadership of high-priced industrials. Soft spots cropped out here and there, but they were disregarded. Lowering of the call money rate from 4 to 3½ per cent stimulated the recovery, which was featured by active short covering operations in a number of recently weak specialties.

Temporary weakness of the rubber shares was due to the lowering of certain tire prices by one of the leading manufacturers. Special strength of Marine preferred was associated with reports that the company would be liquidated as a result of the adverse court decision on the proposed recapitalization plan. Directors of the Brown Shoe Company raised the annual dividend from $2 to $2.50.

The general rise in prices today was not associated with any special development in the day's news but was generally regarded as a correction of a temporary oversold condition. Speculative opinion is still sharply divided over the future trend of prices which probably will depend chiefly upon the course of trade and crops within the next few weeks.

Pivotal industries such as U. S. Steel common, General Motors, General Electric and American Smelting and leading rails such as New York Central and C. & O. took a prominent part in the upturn. Wide fluctuations again characterized the trading in some of the "bluechip" issues, Rossia Insurance soaring nearly 10 points, while Case Threshing, Houston Oil, American Railway Express, Dupont, Warren Brothers and American Machine and Foundry all sold 5 to 8 points above last night's final quotations.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 1—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 8 to 11 points on buying promoted by relatively steady Liverpool cables and apprehensions of cold weather in the southwest. December sold up to [illegible] and March to [illegible] or about 20 points above yesterday's closing quotations, but this bulge was checked by southern selling or realizing and the market reacted 9 or 10 points from the best by the end of the first hour. Trading was comparatively quiet, being restricted probably by the holiday in New Orleans.

Liverpool cables said Continental and Bombay buying with trade calling had checked an early decline in the Liverpool market and reported a slight improvement in demand for cotton cloths from India.

The market eased after the initial buying had been supplied, with prices working back to about the closing quotations of yesterday under realizing or reselling by some of the early buyers and a little selling believed to be for southern account. The offerings were light, however, and trading was quiet late in the morning with prices at midday ranging about 5 to 8 points net higher. A good part of the trading was attributed to further evening up of accounts in preparation for the November first crop figures.

Foreign Exchange.

The foreign exchange market Tuesday was inactive and the general tone was easier. Sterling was off ⅛, the rest of the exchange practically the same as last night's close.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—The raw sugar market was quiet today and in the absence of business prices were nominally unchanged at 4⅝c for Cuban duty paid.

The continued inactivity in the spot market and rather disappointing cables from London caused an easier undertone in the raw sugar futures market and at midday prices were 1 to 4 points net lower. The principal decline was in the near positions, especially December, which reflected the start of liquidation of that delivery. Sellers of this position seemed to be buying the later deliveries, but on the whole business was again of moderate proportions, with the trade still awaiting news from Cuba relative to its proposed restriction plan.

There were no changes in refined prices which are quoted at 5.90c for fine granulated, but business continues light and from nearby territory only.

THIEF ESCAPES WOMAN'S GRIP

Miss Adelaide M. Cushing, superintendent of the Eye and Ear Hospital, overtook and seized, in Fifth avenue near Gist street, last night, a thief who had stolen a lamp from the hospital shortly before. But as she was marching the man back to the institution he suddenly placed the lamp in her hands, darted down an alley and escaped.

Miss Cushing's suspicions had been aroused by the disappearance recently of articles valued at several hundred dollars, and she had been keeping watch. When she saw a visitor go out last night with a lamp she recognized, she jumped into an automobile and chased him.

The Wright Aeronautical Corporation for the nine months ended September 30 shows net profit of $648,616 after all charges, equal to $2.59 a share on the stock, against $1.82 a share in the 1926 period. Third quarter profit was $292,875, or $1.17 a share, against 52 cents a share on the 1926 third quarter.

Youngstown Operations.

Production schedules this week in the Mahoning Valley indicate a steel ingot output of 60 per cent, with 31 of 53 open hearth furnaces active. Of 127 sheet mills 101 are scheduled, one of the best records in many months. Of 20 tube mills, 15 are under power. The A. M. Byers Company has reduced the operation of its Girard property to four days per week, double turn. Trumbull Steel Company has reduced production to 75 per cent, from 85 the preceding week.

Egypt's Cotton Crop Lower.

The Egyptian cotton crop, as of October 31, was reported to the International Institute of Agriculture (Rome) as 272,100 metric tons (about 600,700,000 pounds). These figures show a diminution in the estimate of a month ago and a drop of 52,400 metric tons on last year's production.

Montgomery Ward Sales Up.

Montgomery Ward & Co. reports sales for October were $21,567,455 against $20,154,626 for October, 1926. Ten months sales totaled $156,013,347 against $156,261,323 last year.

Butte Copper and Zinc.

Butte Copper and Zinc Company reports for September quarter. Net income was only $14,682, equal to 2 cents a share, as against $52,051, or 8 cents a share in the September, 1926, quarter. Nine months' net totaled $54,523, or 9 cents a share against $134,388, or 22 cents a share last year.

Rush to New Mining Field.

A Winnipeg dispatch says a new mining field rich in gold, lead, zinc and silver has been discovered northeast of a point about 200 miles up the Hudson Bay Railway. A big rush of prospectors has already begun.

Atlantic Refining Shows Decrease.

Atlantic Refining Company reports for the quarter ended September 30, 1927, consolidated net profit of $1,380,000 after depreciation, reserves and taxes, as against $2,819,123 in September, 1926, quarter. The September quarter's net is equal, after preferred dividends, to $1.97 a share on the common stock, against $4.32 a share in the September, 1926, quarter.

Treasury Financing.

Announcement of Treasury's November 15 financing program in connection with maturing Second Liberty 4¼'s is expected in about a week. Secretary Mellon indicated that certificates of indebtedness will probably be the means employed. Market conditions indicate that Treasury may be able to make its November offering at 3 per cent, but final rate will not be decided until the last moment prior to announcement of the new offering.

Credit Situation.

Recent sweeping liquidation of speculative accounts was factor which prevented credit stringency from developing in connection with the November 1 settlements. While the downward movement was interrupted by a strong rally the middle of last week, brokers reported further substantial reduction in their loans on Friday and Saturday. Most authorities were inclined to believe that the decrease in the brokerage loan statement, due after Thursday's close, would not reach the total of $90,000,000 reported last week. But the consensus was that another important reduction would be reported.

October Listings Over Half Billion.

New listings of stocks and bonds on the New York Stock Exchange in October had an aggregate value of $525,388,705 of which $372,315,425 were new stocks and $23,573,780 additional stocks.

Zinc's Profits Decline.

Net profit of American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Company for nine months of 1927 dropped to $225,185 from $592,388 in the corresponding 1926 period.

Seminole Off 1,000 Barrels.

Production of crude oil in the Seminole area for 24 hours ended 7 a. m. October 31 totaled 344,000 barrels, a decline of 1,000 barrels from the preceding day.

The Steel Leaders' Views.

Looking back to last Friday's meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute the speeches and interviews of prominent steel executives do not appear quite so bearish as they did when they first made their appearance on the news ticker. The fact is that the undercurrent of sentiment was good. As one observer put it: "There was more real optimism and less optimistic bunk than usual." Incidentally, if the railroads resume car and locomotive buying the effect on steel demand would be pronounced. It takes something like 15 tons of steel to build a freight car, on the average.

Oil and Baking Stocks.

From the gist of conversation in some quarters, it seems that those interested in both the oil and the baking stocks will "try something" if and when a satisfactory market is experienced, according to an observer in close touch with the market. They don't dare try overmuch in a market as unsettled as the present one. Baking stocks have been well liquidated and earnings of Ward and other companies are a little better now than in the early months of the year. The one favorable feature in the oils at the moment is the falling off in Seminole output. Offsetting the fear that West Texas production will more than make up such decline, the oil people point out that there is double the gasoline content in Seminole crude. It is a little early for the oils to do much, but should the technical correction of the general market be terminated quickly some of the oil pools plan to resume work.

Tax Comment Varied.

Tax reduction opinions of the Secretary aroused varied comment among bankers and brokers. In banking circles there was almost as much talk of his recommendation that estate taxes be cut as there was concerning the corporate income reduction. It was the latter that interested brokers and the more speculative community most, however. They saw therein a stimulus to business that would offset the decreasing margin of profit that steel men and other industrial leaders complain of. However, a recommendation is a recommendation and a tax cut must be voted by Congress. As the next Congress will be in session coincident with a highly important presidential campaign, the Secretary's recommendations did not have the influence they would at another time.

Firestone Cuts Balloons.

Firestone Tire and Rubber Company has reduced prices on high pressure and balloon casings 5 per cent in addition to the 5 per cent trade discount recently given to dealers. Other manufacturers who made the trade discount are expected to meet the latest price cut.

California Packing.

Sales of California Packing for eight months ended October 31 were about 1,000,000 cases larger than in the preceding fiscal year, but at a lower margin of profit, President Bentley reports. The carry-over this year will be much smaller.

Sears Roebuck Sales Increase.

Sears Roebuck and Company sales for October totaled $29,301,582 as compared with $26,839,501 in October, 1926. Sales for the 10 months were $228,567,254 as against $214,725,261 for the corresponding period last year.

Cuba Cane Shows Profit.

Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation reports for the year to September 30, consolidated net income of $942,120 as against net loss of $1,982,029 in the previous year. Earnings for the past year are equal to $1.88 a share on $50,000,000 7 per cent cumulative preferred and are after deducting bond interest and depreciation.

Sees No Cause for Alarm.

One of the big New York brokerage houses wired its local correspondent today as follows: "It is realized that after such a long period of declining markets and such a fall in prices there should at least be a halting space for after all there is nothing in the present situation that is at all dangerous. To be sure business is not up to standard as measured by last year, nevertheless, the transportation and industrial concerns throughout the country are by no means idle. What is of more concern from a banker's standpoint is the great amount of money that brokers are borrowing in carrying stocks for their clients. The amount, of course, is large judged by former standpoints but, after all, it should not be forgotten that there are some $60,000,000,000 of securities listed on the stock exchange, therefore the loan item only represents 5 per cent of that amount. The great trouble with us at present is that we have not yet been educated up to the changed conditions brought about by the listing of so many new securities on the exchange."

Du Pont's Holdings of Steel.

An official of the Du Pont Company was quoted today as saying that as the Du Pont's holding of steel common had been purchased as an investment, there was no reason for selling it. He said the company was not inclined to increase its holdings on account of objections of the Federal Trade Commission. This statement was obtained following rumors in the street that the Du Pont's had sold out their 200,000 shares of steel on the high market and were on the buying side again the past few days. The 200,000 shares were purchased at $123 a share several months ago.

Gusher at Little River.

Independent Oil and Gas Company is reported to have brought in a well in the Little River section of the greater Seminole area doing 12,000 barrels of oil a day. The well is on a 40-acre tract of which I. O. and G. is sole owner.

Rediscount Changes Unlikely.

Readjustment of Federal reserve rediscount rates or other important changes in credit policies are unlikely until next year, at the earliest, it was stated in authoritative quarters after the reserve agents met with the board in Washington yesterday. Revision of regulations to conform with branch banking provisions of the law was described as the chief business. Business and credit conditions, foreign loan policies and many other matters will be discussed during the week by governors of the 12 banks.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—There was an impressive demand for many stocks on the curb market in the early trading today that had an influence in causing a general improvement in tone and a broader demand in other issues during the greater part of the session, nearly all the important changes being to materially higher levels. The trading, however, was of a quiet, orderly character, chiefly on account of the absence of any special short account which was a factor in causing more urgent buying on other exchanges.

New peak prices were in order again in the industrial specialties. A feature was the two classes of Celluloid stocks, the common advancing 8⅞ to above 115 and the preferred moving up over 5 points. Deere & Co., which reacted in yesterday's late trading, started with a gain of 5 points, and a number of other issues, including American Rolling Mill, Bancitaly, Celanese, Reo Motor, General Baking A and Bordens rose a point or more on fairly large dealings.

Many of the utilities were in renewed demand, a good part of the buying coming from western sources. American Gas and Electric advanced 3 points and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore moved up 2 points. United Gas Improvement rose about a point. Lackawanna Securities was exceptionally weak, falling 1⅜ to the new low record of 54⅝.

There was a brisk demand for many of the oil stocks. Indiana Pipe Line advanced 2⅝ points, making a new high at 79¼. Standard Oil of Indiana advanced to above 73 and Standard Oil of Ohio rose ½.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—(AP.)—Following is the official list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (000 omitted in sales column in bond list):

9 O'CLOCK CURFEW AT EAST BRADY

EAST BRADY, Pa., Nov. 1.—A curfew regulation went into effect here today. The fire siren sounds at 9 o'clock and all under 16 must be home at that hour.

Narrow Fluctuations In Local Market

American Window Glass Machine preferred tumbled 8½ points on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today when a relatively small amount of stock was offered and found bids for the issue very scarce. Lack of demand for the stock is attributed to the recent poor earnings statement which aroused fears that the dividend on the issue would be suspended.

Dividend on Machine common was passed last year, but the directors have maintained payment on the senior issue despite the constantly lowering earnings. The company is a royalty concern deriving its revenues from use of patents by the glass makers. American Window Glass Company is the parent concern in this case and the latter's reduced earnings, due mainly to European competition, have automatically affected the Machine company.

The Life Insurance Trust—An Arrangement of Safety

¶ It is a tribute to your family to create a Life Insurance Trust, because you remove the hazards of inexperience, and assure to them a continuance of a definite income.

¶ A Life Insurance Trust is an arrangement whereby the proceeds of your policies are made payable to us for the use of your family.

¶ It may be as flexible as you wish—a definite monthly income with provisions for additional payments for sickness, children's education, marriage, the purchase of a home, or any other necessary or desirable object.

¶ We submit that this problem is vitally important and suggest an early visit to our Trust Department, when our Trust Officers will be happy to co-operate in establishing your good intentions into definite shape.

¶ Acting in this capacity, this old institution never forgets that the safety and contentment of your family is your primary object and our management will be kindly, as well as competent.

Arrested on a charge of petting by the roadside, a Cleveland couple won judgment of $3,765.50 when they proved they were married.

Our sympathy goes out to the Cleveland police—it's enough to make them lose faith in human nature.

The police shouldn't have arrested the married man. They should have merely sent him to the psychopathic hospital for observation.

FRISBY FEARLESSLY DEFIES INTERLOPER

Plans Finish Fight to Retain the Sanctity of the American Home

If you see this woman, walk, don't run, to the nearest telegraph office and inform Mr. Frisby.

BY MISTER FRISBY
(Our Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Try as I will to keep my mind off personal affairs, I cannot refrain from a word or two about the conduct of Mrs. Frisby lately. I feel it is a duty to warn others.

As my admirers know, I brought her here after she had tearfully promised to never, by word or act, refer to the humiliation of her recent experience in Chicago.

For several days she seemed to be her old self.

Last night I came home at supper time and found she wasn't there.

I inquired about and learned she hadn't been home for several days and nights.

I sat around a while, with my rubbers on, and played a few selections on the phonograph. Then my patience became exhausted.

I put the salt in the sugar bowl and the sugar in the salt saucer, I tied knots in her shoes; I switched on all the lights; I turned the pictures to the wall; and I put peanut shells between the sheets.

Then I waited behind the door with a bucket of water, intending to dash it full in the hussy's face when she returned.

That was last night. She hasn't returned yet.

I write this in case somebody knows Mrs. Frisby's whereabouts, and if she reads this she will blush with shame. And it will be a warning to others. I have just begun to fight.

BUGS BAER Says

ONE of those Leap Year judges who is right about once every four calendars has given a New York man a divorce because his wife bobbed her hair.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

This decision is as wrong as a perforated hot water bottle. If the wife had bobbed the husband's hair then the judge's decision would have been robustly correct.

Or if the sweet woman had bobbed the judge's toupee he could have instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of civic improvements with malicious intent.

But when a woman clips her own corn tassels it's nobody's business but the neighbors'

Peculiar thing about men and other extinct monarchies is that they still step around telling women what they should do. The bobbed hair incident is merely one carping example in the Book of Heckling.

When man starts getting proud about curly locks he is attacking himself in the softest part of his skull. You never saw a woman who was bald at the age of 30.

We admit that women are never sure about the color of their hair. Today's blonde is liable to be yesterday's henna. But a woman keeps her hair until she's 90. In the meantime what's happening to her husband?

By the time he is on the skidding side of 40 his head is barren as a copper roof.

Hair grows all over his face except in the spot where it belongs. And that's on top of his head.

He has sideburns, chinstraps and a walrus mustache that looks like the handlebars on a bicycle. But his dome looks like a new laid egg.

This is the bird who is telling his wife how she should wear her hair. Like all other experts, he isn't an authority on a subject until he has made a complete bankruptcy on his own efforts in that line.

Investigating a Clock With A Can Opener

An Editorial About the Uses of Curiosity.

A little boy looks up at his father while he holds behind his back a nickel-plated alarm clock he has just borrowed from the kitchen.

''Papa,'' he is saying, ''do you know where I can find the can opener?''

Of course, you know what the boy is going to do with that clock when he finds the can opener. You can readily imagine his futile efforts to get it open with a pocket knife and a screw driver and possibly a tack hammer. You can picture his despair when none of these implements was successful and his joy when the idea came to him that a can opener would enable him to probe the vitals of the cogwheeled mystery and learn for himself just how and why the clock ticked off the little seconds and marked the passing of the long hours with its narrow hands.

Certain fathers, reading the foregoing anecdote, will grit their teeth and reflect that if THEIR sons begin carving up the family clocks there will be a half hour of stern retribution.

Many mothers—and mothers ought to understand children better—will throw up their hands in dismay, thinking what terribly destructive little demons children are. In every family there is a punctured drum, a broken music box or a disemboweled doll to testify to the curiosity which people who do not understand human nature call wanton destructiveness.

There are few children, or grown people, who tear things to pieces simply for the purpose of destroying something. The laws of nature, which we must obey whether we want to or not, provide for constant demolition and reconstruction.

And those who would aid in reconstruction wisely, and so as to add to the progress of the world, must have a hand in the demolition. NO NEW THING CAN BE DONE WITHOUT ENOUGH KNOWLEDGE OF OLD THINGS TO IMPROVE UPON THEM.

By the time they are five or six years old, little boys and girls discover that they are intensely curious. They want to know about things. The curiosity is in them, just as hunger is n them, for the purpose of development. Because they are hun- [illegible] they come regularly to their meals, that their bodies may be [illegible].

Because they are curious they ask multitudes of questions and, better still, start original investigations, that their minds may be fed.

The little boy who was looking for the can opener would, upon finding it, seriously impair the usefulness of a seventy-cent alarm clock. But he would know something about clocks and machinery.

He would discover that a coiled steel spring drove one cogwheel which acted upon other cogwheels and through them upon the hands. He would see a short pendulum swinging to and fro and checking off the minutes, giving regularity to the revolution [illegible] the hands.

Undoubtedly he would make an unsuccessful attempt to restore the clock to its original condition. Watch any child who destroys things, and you will observe that he tries still harder to put them together again, and is deeply distressed when he finds that he cannot do so.

Please do not understand us as favoring the use of alarm clocks for juvenile vivisection. There are other ways to gratify children's curiosity besides permitting them to destroy useful things.

But we do urge upon parents to encourage curiosity in their children—to answer all of their questions that can be answered out of human intelligence, and not to believe that they are destined for train wreckers or dynamiters because they are fond of looking into drums and prodding the inside of the piano with screw drivers.

As is a man's curiosity, so will his usefulness in the world be. The smug, self-satisfied gentleman, who cares for nothing beyond his means of getting rich and scorns to interest himself in the building of the house across the street or the wiring of the new electric railroad, is of about as much use as a mud turtle, which is said to be utterly devoid of curiosity.

It is ''finding things out'' that makes the human race move up toward better things—more intelligence, more comfort, more happiness.

Watt was curious about the steam that came from his mother's tea kettle, and the Twentieth Century Limited is one of the results of his gratifying that curiosity. He smashed the tea kettle, of course, and his mother was scandalized, denouncing him for a worthless vandal. But today we can travel between New York and Chicago in twenty hours.

Galileo, Copernicus, Columbus, Fulton, Edison—all have been led by intelligent curiosity to do great things for their fellow men.

The curiosity of the modern scientist will inspire him to devote years of long, patient study to find out one apparently small bit of information. That kind of curiosity has provided cures for smallpox and diphtheria, has made operations painless, and is slowly exterminating consumption and cholera and yellow fever from the face of the earth.

We need not hold ''the bump of destructiveness'' in such horror. It is almost invariably the outward and visible sign of an inward and useful curiosity, and a child gifted with enough of that quality is reasonably sure to get along in the world without assistance.

Watch Step' This Month And Prevent Accidents

November is No-Accident Month. One week of it is apple week. We combine the two because of a slogan—''An Apple a Day Keeps the Doctor Away.'' Paraphrase it to ''Watching Your Step May Keep Both Doctor and Undertaker Away'' and you have a slogan offering a double reward. Saving your own life or that of others or guarding against injury ought to be sufficent inducement for one to watch his step.

That special care DOES PREVENT ACCIDENTS has been proven. In industrial plants where ''no-accident'' contests are held casualties are reduced in such periods. The big steel companies, especially, have found this method a way of lessening accidents. The plan is to match one mill against another, that one with the better record receiving a trophy.

It might be a good plan for adoption by a community were it possible to devise a workable method of applying it. Boards of Trade might pit one district against another. Anything that will prolong life or prevent injuries seems worthy of consideration.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

Looking at Orion

How great Orion rises, hunter of the stars,
And o'er the darkening Autumn fields
His streaming lion's shield triumphant shakes.
High on his shoulder, reddening in the night,
Bright Betelgeuse glows like a burning gem
While Bellatrix beams on his other arm upraised.

To meet the raging Bull's down-launching charge
He swings his pond'rous club above his radiant head,
And, diamonded by brilliant Rigel's gleam,
His foot uplifted magnifies the blow.
The jeweled Three that sparkle on his Belt
Like shaken bells give his defiance forth.

Meanwhile huge Taurus agitates his horns
Whose shining tips the Charioteer beholds,
And red Aldebaran, like a threatening eye,
Glares at th' unfearing foe; while on his flank
The Pleiads clustering in their fire-fly maze
Seem fluttered by the wild onset of war.

Behind Orion's tow'ring form, fierce as a charging boar,
The Dog comes on, fell Sirius blazing in his jaws.
Such sights, forsooth, by mortal eyes were seen
When demi-gods ranged o'er the half-won earth,
And our first parents, struggling to be free,
Encountered oft with more than human foes.

But look! high in the north a different battle's won.
There pale Andromeda, trembling in her chain,
Sees swift the great Sea Monster hastening her doom.
But e'er he strikes, her rescuer's shout is heard,
And Perseus, on wing'd Pegasus arrived with sword
And freezing Horror slays the Monster, saves the Maid.

Aloft in th' midheaven see mild Capella reign.
The Galaxy's high bank supports th' reclining Twins,
Their starry feet dipt deep in th' luminous wave
But as they gaze across the shining stream,
Aghast at bold Orion and the maddened Bull,
Beyond in peaceful fields they see the Ram repose.

Thus the Autumnal sky, dreaming the Past, to thoughtful man
Presents the long array wherein the thronging stars
Record th' ancestral fancies of his ancient race
And point ambitious Science toward her highest goal.

Costly Luxuries

Dr. Godfrey Dewey, simplified speller, says we are wasting nearly a thousand million dollars a year by our failure to take the useless letters out of our words.

An even greater saving could be had if all men would use one language.

Bad habits are costly, but they are luxuries we prize.

Once Overs

That Cheerful Word!

Mr. Office Man, have you ever spoken pleasantly to the woman who scrubs and cleans your apartments?

Undoubtedly you are in the office after hours, passing frequently the toilers who must work at night, so that you may have a clean and presentable place when you come down in the morning.

Is your greeting kind, patronizing or merely a grouchy nod?

If you knew that a pleasant word would be a big help, you would gladly make their arduous work easier, wouldn't you?

Some are unfortunate, cannot control circumstances, have had few opportunities in early life, there are a thousand and one reasons why these workers must do menial tasks or starve.

You had nothing to do with the good fortune which gave you parents who could assist you to help yourself.

The woman who scrubs your floors may have as good blood in her veins as you have, so treat her with courtesy and consideration.

WORDS OF WISDOM

A man who dedicates his life to knowledge becomes habituated to pleasure which carries with it no reproach. —Smith.

A good book is the precious lifeblood of a master-spirit embalmed and treasured up on purpose to a life beyond life. —Milton.

Man often indulges too much in vainglory about his contempt of vainglory. —St. Augustine.

Isn't It So?

An unwelcome guest is one of the best things going.

Sometimes it saves a lot of trouble to take a little at the beginning.

Tales that are Told

Fifty Fifty

"I think, George," remarked Mrs. Gregson, as she came in from the kitchen, "that we ought to invite the Blundells to dinner this evening."

Her husband threw aside his paper and removed his spectacles.

"Er—what was that, my dear?" he asked nervously.

His wife repeated her remark in a firmer voice.

"Just as you like," agreed Mr. Gregson. "But why do you say 'we ought'?"

"Well," replied the other, "their butcher happened to leave their meat here by mistake, and it seems only fair."

Her First Summer on the Farm

"Good morning. I'm the county agent. You must pardon me for being a little late, but I had to drive over 20 miles of rough roads. I guess you didn't mention over the phone just what you wanted with me."

"Now that was stupid of me. But it was lovely of you to come! We can talk it all over. You see I planted some yellow corn in the garden, and I wanted you to tell me what color beans I should plant with it so everything will harmonize."

That Settled That

A celebrated tenor had received an enthusiastic reception. The people flocked around him, and he was hard put to it to acknowledge all the compliments showered upon him.

Finally, an elderly duchess simply overwhelmed him with praise, much to his disgust.

"Your singing took me back to my girlhood days," she enthused.

"Really," murmured the artiste. "I had no idea my voice would carry so far."

Slightly Familiar

There is a certain golfer who is so completely absorbed in his pastime that mere domestic matters have long since ceased to trouble him. He has a small son called William. One evening, upon returning from the golf club, his wife remarked: "William tells me that he was caddying for you all this afternoon." "Is that so?" exclaimed the astonished man. "Well, now you mention it, I thought I had seen that boy before."—Sporting and Dramatic News.

And Was Real

Marie had lost her ring, a gift from her fiance, and she was telling her friend of her trouble.

The friend showed her interest and asked:

"What was the ring like?"

"Like a real one," was the answer.—Vikingen, Oslo.

New York Day by Day

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—New York is a city that puts high premium on feminine beauty. And nowhere is beauty so neglected when it begins to tarnish. That is why so many beauty parlors flourish. Women fight age here as they would a plague. And you can scarcely blame them.

Hundreds of otherwise sensible men are thrilled to the marrow following some dazzling creatures to a safe table just to see admiring glances of strangers they will never know. Show girls and mannequins have received as much as $200 a night—just to ornament a dinner table.

One of the great annoyances of beauty show producers is to dodge vulturine gentlemen who employ every sort of device and deception to meet reigning ladies of the ensemble. As a general thing, these men are flattered merely to be seen with a noted beauty.

And satisfied to be, as Broadway puts it, "door-stepped" when they take them home. Beauty requires little cultural background here to be courted. So true is this that "the beautiful and dumb" are envied by many sisters reared in the hothouse atmosphere of boarding schools who remain wall flowers.

That now ancient story actually had its inception in the foyer of the Ritz where one of the most beautiful red-haired show girls of that day awaited her escort to dinner. She wore the latest Parisian creation and every eye was upon her.

"You look," said a gushing acquaintance, "like a bit of rare old Venetian tapestry." Eyeing her coldly, the beauty sniffed: "You don't look so darn well yourself." And that well-known line: "I seen you when you done it," was the kittenish remark of a Dumb Dora to a millionaire banker she later married.

Clothes, beauty and youthfulness form a triple combination that is unbeatable for soft living in a hard-boiled town. But the finish when they begin to fade is about the most tragic of all finishes for those who live dangerously.

And masculine beauty is not sneezed at in the metropolis. There are any number of suave, handsome men whose lives seem honed to luxury, yet without visible means of support. You see them year after year at the smartest places, the lives of the party and studious, interested in looking out the window when the check arrives.

* * *

Professional feminine beauties are largely of two types—the languidly indifferent and the impertinent. They are unable, however, to conceal the "Look-at-me" self conscious manner. Yet they must have some technique. They can live without work. That may not be everything but it is something.

* * *

And yet when one thinks of famous Broadway beauties there is always a memory of Nan Patterson, Evelyn Thaw and Dot King, who found only sorrow in the luxurious glitter and hurrah.

It is said Dot King, a few nights before she was found garroted in her apartment, told a friend: "Broadway has given me only flowers, a few jewels and a sincere wish I had never left home."

* * *

One of the finest estates on Long Island is thrown open several days a week to sightseers. In all that time—eight years to be exact—the owner says the damage to his place has not been more than $500. Children have been especially careful and the worst souvenir hunters, he says, are old ladies. But their pilfering was chiefly among the rare flowers.

A breezy western gentleman in a restaurant last night asked the waiter for "some of those olives with the red tail lights."

My vote for the most finished performance of the dramatic season up to now is that of [illegible] Skelly and Barbara Stanwyck in "Burlesque."

Government Money

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

Few people realize the enormous size of the government payroll and how many people are employed not in producing but in taking money from those who have produced.

The prosperity of a country, its real strength, depends upon its producers. If these should stop their work the country would slump.

According to a recent announcement, the Internal Revenue Bureau stated that for the year ending June 30 there had been $1,308,000,000 income tax collected from corporations. This is unprecedented and exceeds all previous records.

The year before the collections amounted to $213,000,000 less.

Do we realize what this means?

It means that the government takes 13 per cent of the corporations' net income for the first half of the year and 13½ per cent for the second. That is to say, a corporation must give up to the government 13½ per cent of its profits before it begins to pay its shareholders.

A tax is undoubtedly a restraint to any enterprise. Nobody objects to taxing tobacco because tobacco is a luxury. No man has to use it and those who enjoy this form of diversion are perfectly willing to pay for it. So with the tax on amusements. When we read, therefore, of an increase of $5,503,000 in the tobacco manufacturers' tax we do not especially object.

But these corporations who are taxed 13½ per cent are the backbone of the country's prosperity. They employ thousands of laborers and they pay dividends to thousands of shareholders. The government by this income tax is crippling them, and by so doing it is cutting its own throat, for these corporations are the geese that lay the golden eggs for us.

To go into business nowadays a man must count on making a large amount for the government before he starts making any money for himself.

Many more would engage in business enterprises were it not for this handicap.

A reasonable sales tax would obviate all this difficulty and remove from the government's employ an army of spies and sycophants that now infest it. The sales tax has been tried and it is not burdensome upon anyone. It lies with equal weight upon all and surely all of us enjoy the blessings and protection of the government and we should be willing to pay for it.

Most of these people who insist upon the government taxing the corporations are people that do not make much themselves and that cannot be taxed. They belong to that great army of those who have nothing and make nothing and insist that the people who do make money should support them.

The whole income tax business is a system of robbery and blackmail and force on the part of the government and should be abandoned.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Unmasked

It may be true that in the world of men one needs to wear a mask the whole day through, to hide the inner self and being when these must be sheltered from the casual view. For there are secret depths of joy and bliss, of love and loathing that no man would share with other eyes; hope's height and hate's abyss, and flowing wells of rapture and despair. But in the welcome hours of release from all restraints unfriendly eyes impose, in tranquil twilights or with dawning's peace, the soul must face the secrets that it knows. The issues of its good or evil ways must all be met, however hard the task; the self that hides through busy, toil-filled days must in the end confront itself, unmask!

In discussions, Edison is in the habit of driving home his points by vigorously pounding on a table or other convenient surface. On account of his deafness it is difficult to argue with him, but convinced that he is wrong he may say: "I see now that my position was absolutely rotten."

Charles and Theodore are actively engaged in their father's enterprises. Theodore assists Edison in the technical end of the work. Charles, shown in this picture, is president of the Edison Industries, comprising the phonograph, dictating machine, storage battery, primary battery plants and also the cement works.

William H. Meadowcroft has been associated with Edison for about 46 years. His loyalty to "the old man" has earned for him the respect and admiration of all those with whom he comes into contact. Mr. Meadowcroft is author of "The Boy's Life of Edison," and is president and historian of the Edison Pioneers.

In 1913 the Independent Magazine held a referendum on the most useful American. The poll showed Edison in the lead. Among the comments accompanying the votes was this: "There is no one like him. He is the one-man-to-the-century inventor. Millions of people are his debtors."
